GUEST EDITOR'S LETTER

When Scott Gramling offered one lucky FHM reader his cushy editor-in-chief chair and power to run the magazine for a month, I jumped at the opportunity. And although I spent about 80 hours devising and graphically designing an outline for my ideal May issue, I was still shocked when Scott called my Brevard, NC, home to notify me that my entry had been chosen among the thousands that were submitted by FHM readers. New York, here I come!

My first order of business upon arriving was to meet up with professional pool player Jennifer Barretta at the Reporter Girl shoot. I was surprised at how laid-back everyone was on the set. The photographer, Eric Cahan, kept asking, "What do you think we should do, Guest Editor Bitch?" While he was fiddling with his equipment between setups, Jennifer tried to teach me how to hit the ball properly. I looked like an idiot playing pool with my bum finger though. I had a Scottish Claymore sword in my car and when I took it out before going to the airport, it slid out of the sheath and cut me all the way to the bone.

The highlight of my tenure was sifting through the hundreds of submissions from lovely young ladies hoping to be this month's Hometown Honey. I felt like I was playing God in getting to choose one. I usually tend to go for the dark-skinned, dark-haired girls, but felt I kept an open mind when looking through all the photos of blondes and redheads. In the end, I went with Jamie Everett from Belcourt, ND. She's absolutely gorgeous—as I'm sure every FHM reader will agree.

The worst part about being the editor is having to wait a few weeks between when the issue is done and when it hits newsstands. I can't wait for the magazine to come out because I still don't think my friends believe me when I tell them I went to New York to work at FHM. People at my job are probably thinking, "His sorry-ass is working this security job for the rest of his life." Maybe so. But, at least for one month, I was the king.

Enjoy my issue,

David Tucker

Booth sees action

I saw that you wanted women to send in pictures of themselves stripping in a photo booth. Not being much of a risk taker, I surprised myself one day when I found a booth in the middle of the mall and got inside. Here's my proof that you shouldn't overlook the seemingly shy girl. It's the quiet ones you have to look out for. Just ask my boyfriend.
M. Cohen, Glendale, AZ

We're especially impressed by the way you showed your patriotism by wearing American-flag panties. You've made your country proud, and you'll soon be receiving your $100 check. The same will go to any other woman whose photo-booth striptease we print.

READER OF THE MONTH

Omar Sheikh, Syracuse, NY

Occupation Personal trainer and juvenile-corrections officer
Cheese or Bacon? "Neither. I don't eat pork products, and I hate cheese."
How much do you bench? 405
Tell us a story "I'm half Pakistani. Once when I was 7, my father took me to Pakistan. He used to take guns with him, then sell them in Pakistan for a profit. But someone had just tried to kill the Pakistani leader, so security was up. And my father had three suitcases full of guns. They took him away. I spent three months by myself in Pakistan with relatives I didn't know. Once he finally got out of jail, he took me hunting every day."
Statement of devotion to FHM "I'd drink a protein shake of cow intestines for FHM."

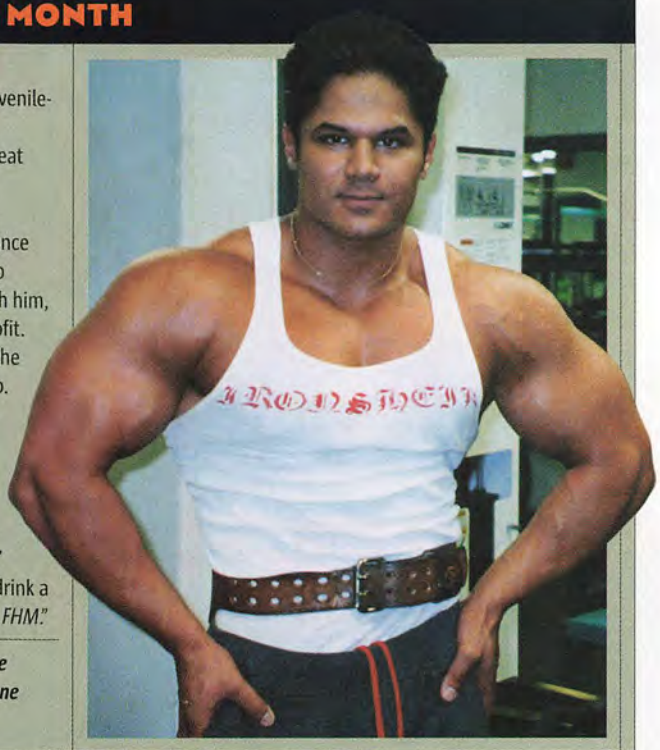
Are you qualified to be Reader of the Month? Send pictures and your phone number, and we'll decide.



TRICKS FROM THE WIDOW!

"The trick pool shot from The Black Widow in your March issue looked simple," writes Brandon Rawot and Dan Feldman from Cincinnati. So they decided to try the shot on one of their frat pledges, Brian Schumpp. "We have a bad habit of looking only at pictures and ignoring all those annoying words," the boys continue. "So, we seem to have missed the step about how not to break a friend's jaw. Oops." That does look painful, guys. We're sure you were equipped to handle the crisis though. You're in a frat—that can't be the first time one of your pledges has had balls hitting him on the chin.

Men flaunt sexual inexperience

This is the first platoon of the 340th MP Company from Queens, NY. We've been in Iraq since the beginning of the war and want to give everyone a shout out from the desert. Print our picture and have your readers guess who the lucky soldier is who just lost his virginity.
SPC Will Dreisbach, Iraq

We have our guess: It's a trick question, right? The answer is that none of you have lost your virginity! (We're pretty sure that's right, but for the answer SPC Dreisbach gave in his letter, check the tiny print to the right of the page.)

Want to share your thoughts, complaints, photographs or claims that you scored some hot tail?
Send them to us at Letters to the Editor, FHM, 110 Fifth Ave., New York, NY 10011, or e-mail letters@FHMUS.com. Notes that see print earn $50; send us a picture and we'll pay you double for it.

DEVOTION

'VIDA WON'T GET OFF ME!'

A second batch of men use FHM's beauty to spruce up their bodies

Another month, another set of Vida tattoos. "This is a prison tattoo done with a guitar string and the motor of a Walkman," says Martin Barajas (above right), aka Big Daddy Ta Ta of California's Atwater prison.

Meanwhile, Duane Campbell of Marion, NC, (above left) took a different approach. "I put body jewelry and tattoos on my Vida so she'd look unique," he explains. "Vida is some Latin food I would love to taste. There's bound to be a lot of salsa in that jar." Cleverly put.

And finally, we celebrate the return of Brooklyn, NY's Joseph Margiottiello, who ignited the tattoo craze in our September 2003 issue. "I started a sexy angel tattoo sleeve around my thigh," he says. "I said I wasn't going to reuse Vida. Then came the December 2003 Latin Lingerie issue. I had no choice!" Joseph also wants to thank his tattoo artists: Paul Raffelo and Anthony Taranto. If you're looking to get your own Vida tat in Brooklyn, we can vouch for their experience.

OUTREACH

BOOZE CHARITY

When life gets tough, readers win the gift of beer

Seeing that FHM printed free-beer cards for readers with sob stories, Bill Rose of Rockford, IL, wrote with this tale: "I've been waiting for months for my girlfriend to return from the Army. On our 14-hour car ride home, I noticed she seemed different. Still, I gave her a diamond-and-sapphire promise ring. Two days later, she broke up with me, saying I was 'too nice' and that kissing me was like 'kissing a cousin.' I spent a ton on the ring and now I've even had my hours cut at work. Can you help?"

We absolutely can, Bill. Cut out this card and show it to guys in bars. Any sympathetic dude will buy you a cold one.

BUY THIS MAN A BEER!

WE THE EDITORS OF FHM CERTIFY THAT Bill Rose DESERVES A FREE BEER.

He bought his girlfriend a diamond ring. Then she dumped him. And told him his kisses were like those of her cousin. And kept the ring. Please alleviate his suffering through the healing touch of alcohol.

PITY EXPIRATION DATE: MAY 31, 2004

Attention losers!

If you've had a hard month, send details of your misery and a photo to Booze Charity at the usual address.

FROM THE BOSS'S DESK

Maximize the time your supervisor is out of the office

"The only thing Mitch is more protective of than his computer is his wife," says Stephanie Peake, 24, of her boss, Mitch Bruning, at Makeplays.com in Phoenix. "Just think of what he'll say when he sees that I was with both of them."

Stephanie's a personal trainer at Mitch's sports performance company. You could say Mitch practically invited the threesome when he asked her to give his wife a "workout." Mitch's wife promptly used his keys to slip into his office and snap these sexy shots of Stephanie. Their girlish fun was not free of consequences, however. "We were sharing some wine and I accidentally spilled a bit on the keyboard," Stephanie confesses. "But Mitch won't mind. After seeing these pictures, he'll definitely go home a happy man."

ADVICE

ANN LANDERS OF STRIPPING

Profound exotic dancer spreads wisdom like it's baby lotion

I am a stripper at Scores in New York City, and I've written an article on how to pick up a stripper," writes dance professional Taylor Lee. "If it's night, I am probably doing a fine table dance for a guy who subscribes to FHM. I bet he is really hoping you will publish my article. Especially if he likes tall blondes (me) who enjoy long walks on the beach (me), cuddling by the fire (so me) and jumping up and down so their large perky breasts bounce in time to '80s hair music (me)."

Moved by Taylor's elegant prose, FHM has promised to give her a shot at writing a future article. Look for her byline in later issues. But first, her advice. . . .

Pickup tips from Taylor

I, and the women I work with, are strippers. This means we are all hot-looking and good in bed. In the dressing room after work, we talk about the guys we dance for. At points in the conversation, we are all totally naked. Whether we tell you or not, sometimes we are really tempted to go out with you. All you have to do is figure out how to seduce us.

◆ First, pick the right target. Don't confuse friendly with pushy. If a girl doesn't even say "hi" before she whips out her large, well-oiled guns and bitch slaps you in the face with them, she is probably just using you.

◆ Come in early in the evening when it's less busy. Pick an entertainer who has enough respect for you to sit down and talk for a song or two. Songs are how dancers measure time. We have to pay the club part of what we make, so even when we want to, we can't sit for too long. Be respectful back and, after a few minutes, get a dance or three. If you don't ask to see our boobs, we will feel used and cheap and we won't like you anymore.

If you don't ask to see our boobs, we will feel used

◆ Don't ask a stripper what her real name is; play into her fantasies. If a girl says her name is Bambi, act like you believe her. Then treat her like she is sweet and innocent. Dancers have fantasies just like you.

◆ Some strippers are only looking for meaningless sex. We may be trying to get you drunk, and then we will take you back to our place and introduce you to our cute friend Bridget, or maybe even our pet gerbil Sven. This would be a good time to remember rule No. 1: Pick the right girl—aka me.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH FHM?

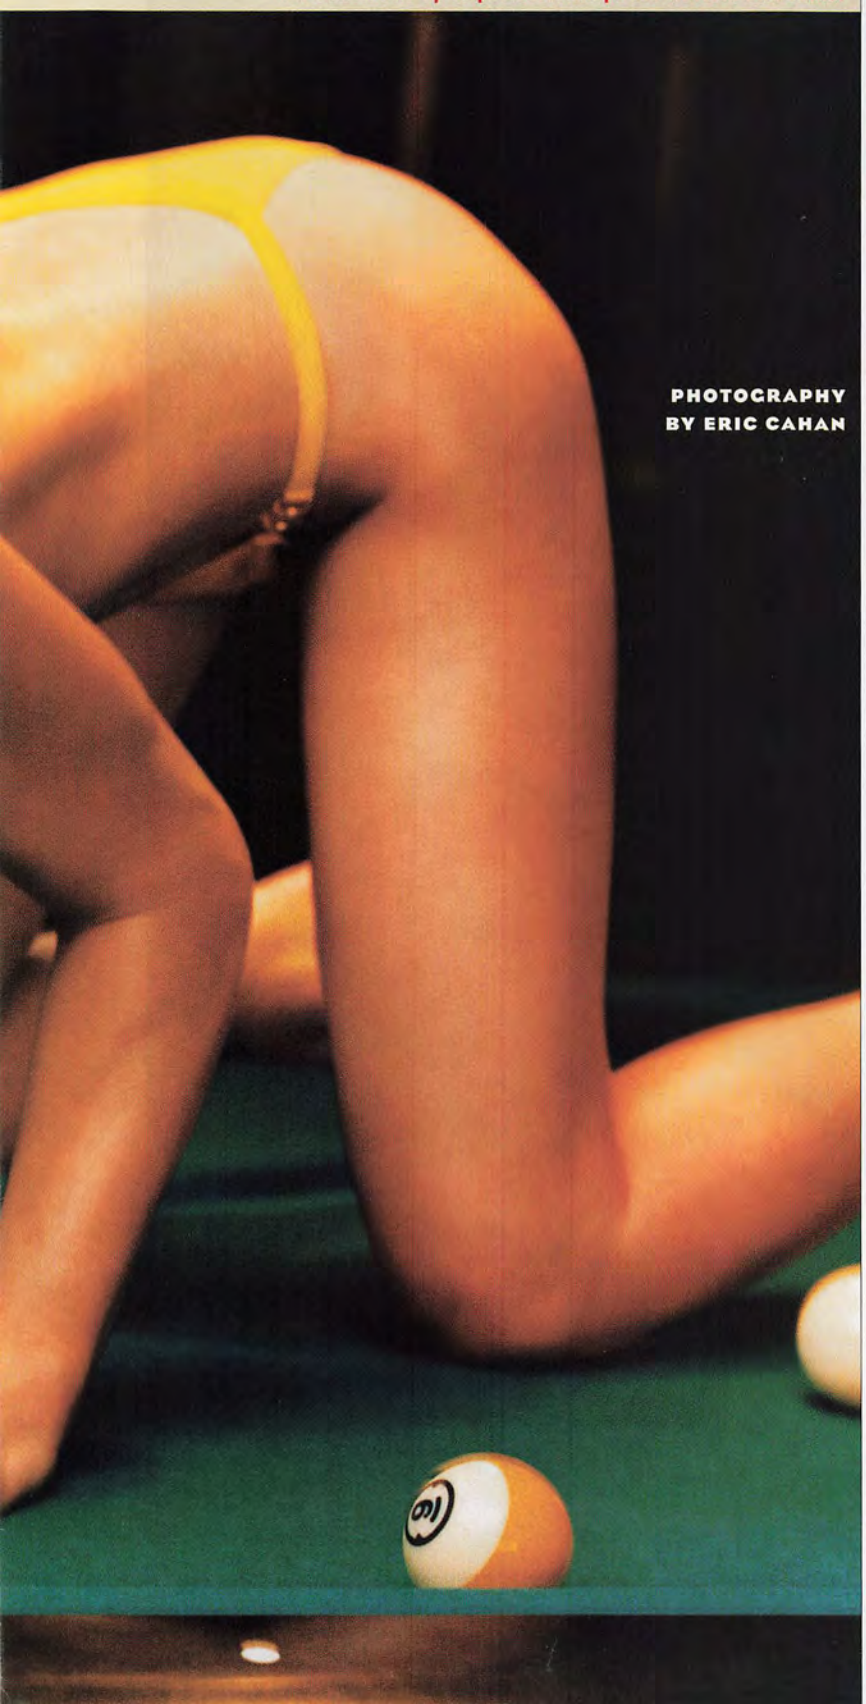
THE FHM REPORTER GIRL

JENNIFER BARRETTA

FHM cushions up to professional pool's hottest ball-sinker



PHOTOGRAPHY BY ERIC CAHAN

That was very painful for me," says pro pool player Jennifer Barretta after the last snap of FHM's photo shoot. Not the cheery ending we were hoping for. What did we do?

"It's not you," says the 35-year-old beauty, sensing our shock. "And trust me, I'm totally comfortable in a bikini—it's that rolling around on a rock-hard pool table for two hours hurts like hell. I don't normally do that. I've never even made out on one. I treat the table with respect."

That becomes clear when FHM later meets the Women's Professional Billiards Association's hottest at a New York City pool hall for a game and a chat.

"Here's the deal," she announces as she removes her cue from its custom bag. "You can't ask me questions while it's my turn because it throws me off. I might talk to you, but that's up to me." Fair enough. The only problem is that FHM doesn't get to hit a single ball in our first two games: Jennifer runs the table and we don't get a question in before we call it quits. Instead, she tells us about growing up in Norristown, PA, competing in fitness competitions—"They're beauty competitions with muscles"—and how she took up the game after realizing she could play pool better than the men in her life. Jennifer tells us these things as she circles the table in high-heeled boots, sinking every damn shot.

Some female players say their breasts get in the way, but I swear it helps

"Some female players say their breasts get in the way, but I swear it helps," she says. "If the cue is under my breast, rubbing a bit, I know I'm lined up correctly."

By the end of game two, a crowd has gathered to watch Jennifer kick FHM's ass. "How did you learn such great shaft handling?" we ask, scratching what would be our only shot all night. "Look, I've heard all those lines before," Jennifer replies. "'Stick-and-ball control,' 'Being a ball-breaker.' Real pool players don't make those jokes." It's not for the first time this evening we're silenced. Well, what do real pool players do, Jennifer?

"I practice six hours a day," she explains. "And I train with a coach once a week." A coach? "Pool is a sport, not a game. I even asked him for advice before the photo shoot. He didn't have a problem with it, but he wasn't much help instructing me on how to be sexy on top of a pool table." And how will the women's pool establishment react to Jennifer's FHM appearance?

"They're not going to like it. Pool is very conservative, but I've spent my whole life in bikinis, so it doesn't compromise my morals at all," she says. The pool hierarchy should be proud to have Jennifer on the tour though. Hell, she doesn't even hustle fat men in bars to supplement her income.

"Well, that's not entirely true," she concedes. "I don't like playing the game for money, but I've definitely hustled a boy or two into a game of strip pool." (JB)

PROBES FOR PROFIT

Sell your body without having to blow strangers in Greyhound bathrooms

"You can make $20,000 a year from medical tests or by donating body parts," says Bob Heyman, creator of a new course called Body Bucks: How to Sell Your Body to Science While You're Still Alive, available at online education site Newcanoeu.com. "And your body is the best business—you always take your inventory with you." Here's how.

Hair

Wig-makers pay cash for mullets. Quality beats quantity, and finer hair is more prized. But for the adventurous, there's a more profitable market. "On eBay, you can sell a full head of long hair for thousands to fetishists," Heyman says.
Easy money $200 to $3,000

Sleep studies

There's more than pointless erections to be earned at night. Excellently, you don't even have to be a problem sleeper to cash in on snooze-pattern studies. As long as you don't mind cute co-eds watching closely as you pitch a sheet-tent, that is.
Easy money $150 per snooze

Drug and alcohol studies

The government is fixated on how drugs and booze affect the body, but rather than ask Ted Kennedy, they'll juice you up and pay you for it. "Johns Hopkins once paid people to take ecstasy," Heyman says. "That's a personal favorite."
Easy money $150 per session

Blood plasma

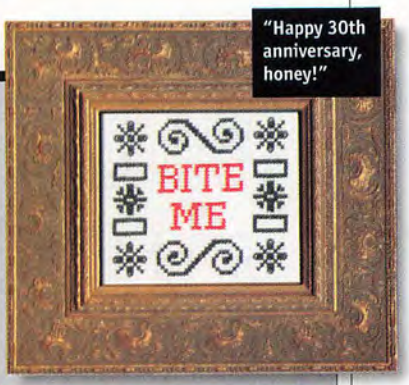
Stop donating to children's hospitals and turn that red stuff into green. "The United States is the OPEC of blood," Heyman explains. "You can give blood for money every 10 days here—the shortest lag in the world." God bless!
Easy money $60 for less than a pint

Sperm

Your sperm must pass mobility and freezability tests—tough if you're not aged between 19 and 24 years old—and you'll face a 200-question background quiz too. "Also, today's market wants the sperm of tall people," Heyman adds.
Easy money $40 per load

Significant other

A fertile lady is an ATM of opportunity. Her eggs can be extracted for profit with a giant needle. If that doesn't appeal, but morning sickness does, surrogate mothers are always in demand.
Easy money Eggs go for $8,000; womb rental nets up to $50,000. (KA)



DECORATION

CRUDE CRAFTS

Even moms like Sharon Osbourne will love this cross-stitch

"'Go Fuck Yourself' is a big seller," says Julie Jackson, the brains behind a new range of rude needlepoint patterns called Subversive Cross-stitch. "But 'Bite Me' and 'Do Not Fuck With Me' are also very popular."

That's because nothing is funnier than swearing. The patterns come pre-stitched or in kit form. "I'm selling these to everyone from goth girls to male lawyers," Jackson says. "There's nothing wrong with men who cross-stitch. I'd take a cross-stitching man over a cross-dressing man any day." (JB)

Decomposing whale paints the town red

Help a girlfriend move and your back will break under the weight of her archive of Antonio Sabato Jr. posters. It's a fate nearly as bad as helping a Taiwanese marine biologist move a whale and ending up covered in guts.

After this 50-ton, 56-foot sperm whale ran aground on a beach in the county of Yunlin, scientists craned it onto a truck and headed to nearby Shi-Tsao Natural Preserve. En route, the whale's organs exploded due to internal decomposition that caused a gas buildup, leaving the area smelling of the world's biggest whale fart. (SB)

HEBREW HOOPSTERS

Yahweh's people rock hardwood throwbacks

From cutting your teeth rhyming at bar mitzvahs to convincing your mom you won't be a doctor, being a Jewish rapper can be tough. Thanks to throwback barons Stall & Dean, at least your fashion choice is easy.

"The Hebrews played in the Philadelphia Jewish leagues of the 1920s and '30s," explains designer Scott Turner. At the time, Philly Jewish hoops was hotter than a schvitz with Alan King. Today, the team is gone, but they did go on to play as the Washington Generals—the team the Harlem Globetrotters always beat.

In FHM office testing, however, Jewish staffers complained that the jersey was too big. Who's buying, then? "We have Jewish buyers expressing their pride," Turner says. "But some people just think it kicks ass." (JM)

'IT'S ART, WOMAN!'

Critics agree: Collecting smut posters makes you cultured

For Dad, porn meant shuffling in a cinema while trying not to soil his raincoat. At least the posters were arty. A new book, X-Rated Collection: Adult Movie Posters of the 60s and 70s, collects 150 classics. FHM asked Tod Tarhan, the designer of posters for Pulp Fiction and Swingers, for an appraisal.

"This work is groundbreaking," Tarhan confirms. "Indeed, it has laid the foundations for many mainstream posters of today." So, if your girlfriend doesn't like them, that's what to tell her.

LASSIE KNITS

Get inside your dog without breaking the laws of nature

Like France, your canine's constant shedding is a filthy nuisance. But not for Victoria Pettigrew: Her company, VIP Fibers, turns pet hair into knittable yarns.

"I used to save the fluff off Booboo Bear, my chow," says the Morgan Hill, CA, spinner. "I'd say, 'Someday I'm going to make a sweater out of Booboo Bear.'"

Now all pet lovers can share her dream. Simply collect your dog's hair, send it to Pettigrew and she'll spin it into a yarn or make you a dog-grown garment.

"I have a customer whose sick poodle is losing its hair," Pettigrew notes. "She's saving it so she can knit it a sweater from its fur." But humans are the ones who benefit the most: Long-haired breeds such as huskies can produce yarns that are 50 percent lighter than wool and up to 80 percent warmer.

"Dog hair can be beautifully soft and it's perfect for very cold climates," Pettigrew says. "We've also done dachshunds and hamsters. They're different. You don't want those against your skin."

Now if only someone could turn children's tears into beer. (TC)

WHO THE HELL ARE YOU?

Iraq war justified
Ignore the long-hairs: If America didn't go to war, this photo would never have landed at FHM. "Iraqi cops are intrigued by the women in our military," writes Senior Sgt. William Carlson. "I snapped one with my colleague, but I didn't notice the other guy." Understandable. It's easy to miss a dancing loon toting an AK.

Paul Bunyan cuts in
Jeff Cowens of Highland Heights, KY, was taking a photo of a friend busily smothering a lady when he was interrupted by a fashion-challenged stranger. "We were at a wedding reception," Jeff writes. "Who the hell wears a hat like that to a wedding?" People in Kentucky, presumably.

Creepy Cousteau ogles bather
"I thought my photo session was private," writes Heather Leftwich of Altamonte Springs, FL, "but it wasn't at all. Usually I love an audience and I even said hello to the balding perv in the background, but five minutes later he skied past and soaked me. That's what jerks do."

Grinner joins lineup
While Zach Hoke of Kennesaw, GA, took photos of bikini girls at a motor-sport event, another man enjoyed another American tradition: crushing dreams. "The Hawaiian Tropic babes were at a road race in Braselton, GA," Zach writes. "Now look at my photo. It's ruined."

Asshole tag-team suplexes snap
"Mean Gene Okerlund is an American hero," gushes Kelly Black of Monroe, LA. "I was psyched to get a photo with him, but who the hell are the dicks cutting in?" We haven't seen such tag-team evil since the Orient Express slammed Owen Hart with Mr Fuji's cane in Royal Rumble '92.

'EAT LEAD, BAMBI!'

Puppets teach kids the joys of slaughtering helpless mammals

"There are videos that introduce kids to classical music," says Wayne Meech of Chesterfield Township, MI. "But I'm not interested in that stuff, so why should my son be? I like hunting."

Thus was born Little Hunter—a video that helps 9- to 36-month-olds learn about game animals through the use of puppets.

"There's a scene where a deer scrapes ground before urinating," says Meech, the video's producer. "Kids love that!"

Who wouldn't? But shouldn't parents wait until their child's fourth birthday before extolling the joys of slaying beasts?

"The only connection to hunting is at the end of the movie," Meech corrects. "The viewer sees a little deer and a voiceover says, 'Happy hunting,' then you hear a gun click. The deer disappears. But as the credits roll, it reappears as a steak." (JB)

Take the heat

"We have a chamber that simulates any weather condition: 0 to 165 degrees, 40 mph winds, 90 percent humidity, driving rain, you name it," says Gentry, above left. "I walked on a treadmill for six miles in 104 degrees every day for two weeks to test the effects of amino acids on dehydration. After a day like that, your legs are like Jell-O."

Endurance testing

"I was involved in testing the Scorpion," Udy says. "It's a biochemical-proof and ballistics-proof suit that's being designed for our special-forces units. We had to hit the obstacle course in it, but the whole thing weighs 62 pounds. There were hurdles to jump, barbed wire to get through, a five-foot wall, windows and stairs to climb over and a two-mile run at the end of it. I did it in 24 minutes."

Staff members' canteen

"Not all of the testing we do here kicks your ass though," Gentry notes. "We taste new rations and give feedback. Recently, I had to eat this shrimp-and-bean, gumbo-type thing. It looked totally gross, but I ended up asking for more."

Hardware investment

"We're working on a new exoskeleton suit," Udy explains. "It's going to weigh 100 pounds, but the soldier won't feel it at all. The upper-body section is being developed so that he can pick up a 600-pound missile and put it onto a helicopter without breaking a sweat. I was like, 'Guys, if I break this, are you going to pick up the tab?' It was cool getting to wear a million dollars on your back." (KA)

'SIT, ZOMBIE, SIT'

Make your own undead plaything

Zombification began as a punishment in Haiti. People were poisoned, buried alive and left for dead. After three days, they re-emerged as zombies—if they hadn't died. Here voodoo expert Bob Corbett explains how to make an undead friend.

Poison your victim

If you can't find a naughty Haitian, enlist a buddy who likes a gag. Have him imbibe tetrodotoxin, a powerful poison extracted from the puffer fish. His heart rate will drop and his motor functions will cease to work.

Entomb that proto-zombie

Bury your zombie-to-be alive and leave him in his dirt locker for three days. He will be aware of his surroundings but hilariously unable to move. "The drug doesn't last forever," Corbett says. "It will soon start to wear off."

Raise the dead

After three days, command your amigo to rise. He will then claw out of the grave as a zombie. Or not. "Most people don't survive the zombification process," Corbett notes. "Voodoo priests play with the chemical recipes loosely."

Enjoy the zombie

Your friend's now a mess, but he won't eat brains. "People built up myths to explain zombies," Corbett says. "Brain-eating makes sense: The zombie is empty-headed, so he must crave brains. But I've eaten them and I'm no smarter." (KA)

SCULPTURE

ARMY OF TRASH!

Finally, a legion the French military might be able to defeat

When it comes to being utterly useless, nothing tops Ryan Seacrest. Except Ha Schult's Trash People sculptures. The German artist not only makes statues out of garbage, but he also takes 1,000 of them on tour around the world.

Schult forges his six-foot trash sculptures from cans, bottles and high-tech industrial waste. Then he crams them into such places as Moscow's Red Square and the streets of Paris. As you see here, they've also appeared in front of Egypt's pyramids at Giza, on a two-mile stretch of the Great Wall of China and at the foot of Switzerland's Matterhorn. Conveniently, Schult's sponsors include the German Post Office and a moving firm.

The artist hopes to eventually send his tin-can legion to New York City, Australia, Rio de Janeiro and even Antarctica. And if that sounds overly ambitious, a miniature Trash Person has already been to space, carried aboard the Space Shuttle Endeavor by a German astronaut. Way to use your budget wisely, NASA.

Kids do what Axl can't: keep a Guns N' Roses concert date

"Even we could kick Winger's ass"

Without Guns N' Roses, how would we know that immigrants spread AIDS, drummers can't be trusted and redheads have more fun? To ensure their legacy isn't lost, Li'l G'N'R—a New York City–area, three-girl, two-boy non-instrument-playing band of kids—are bringing the Gunners' wisdom back to the spotlight. FHM caught up with Li'l Slash and Li'l Axl, ages 6 and 10.

Why are Guns N' Roses so good?
Li'l Axl It's good music. My favorite song is "Paradise City." It's great to bring Guns N' Roses back to the kids.
What do you think of Axl today?
Li'l Axl My mom told me he was a big blob, just sitting in rehab.
And what do you like about being Slash?
Li'l Slash His personality, snakes and hat.

"This one's off The SpaghettiOs Incident"

Should kids rock?
Li'l Slash Yeah! But I might change my mind when I'm a man.
Li'l Axl They should be careful with their singing voices and not get into fights.
What do you think of today's pop stars?
Li'l Axl I don't like Britney. She acts all sweet, but what she does is sick. If Christina Aguilera stopped doing all the dumb stuff she's doing, she'd be good.
What's your goal with Li'l G'N'R?
Li'l Axl We played CBGBs in New York, but I'd love to play Madison Square Garden.
What about playing some of the L.A. clubs where Guns N' Roses first rocked?
Li'l Slash I don't think I could afford that. You know, I live in New Jersey. (MS)

BURNING QUESTIONS

Is there any difference between a computer virus and a worm?
Ralph Eddy, Somerville, MA
Viruses need hosts and usually arrive in your in box via an attachment: Click to learn more about "anal librarians" and you're screwed. Worms are even more evil: They don't need hosts and can jump from one computer to another via network connections. Both are created by overweight men whose only joy is conning kids out of their Magic cards, however.

Why is aluminum foil shiny on one side and dull on the other?
R.J. Carlson, Newark, DE
And which side do bums use for picking up space transmissions? Productivity is behind the different textures. In processing, two foil sheets go through steel rollers at the same time. The side in contact with the roller becomes shiny, the other side stays dull.

Do conjoined twins get one Social Security number or two?
Glen Wiggy, Papillion, NE
According to the U.S. Social Security Administration, conjoined twins are legally separate people. Which is funny, because often they don't look like it. As a result, they get two birth certificates and two Social Security numbers. They have to share toilet seats though. Bummer. (TS)

HEY! ADAM BRODY . . .

IT'S YOUR EX-GIRLFRIEND

Her ex plays The O.C.'s thoughtful sap Seth Cohen. Erin McKinley thought she'd remind him what he's missing

Erin McKinley was shocked when her ex became a success. "I never expected Adam to make it in TV," says the 24-year-old San Diego hottie. "I thought he'd be a surfer for the rest of his life." Today, Adam plays Holden Caulfield–wannabe Seth Cohen on The O.C. (What? You knew that? Whipped!) Here's how to avoid making the same mistakes he did.

Don't abbreviate romance

"For my birthday, Adam bought me a gold chain with our first initials on it. But instead of a heart between the letters, it had an ampersand, so it read 'A&E.' That's not romance, that's a TV network."

Adam gave me a gold chain with our initials on it. It read 'A&E'

Watch the clock

"Adam was always late. Once, I wanted him to feel what it was like to be kept waiting, so I hid in my car outside the place where we were meeting. When he arrived on time, he asked me what I was doing. I replied, 'I'm trying to be late.'"

Think outside the parking lot

"When I was with Adam, we never did much. We'd hang out with the same people in the same parking lot every day. I want a man with a plan."

Get your own digs

"Adam and I were still living with our parents when we were together. I would have to sneak him into my room at night. Once, my mother caught us together in bed. She pulled me into the hall and demanded that he leave immediately. Adam slept through the whole embarrassing ordeal." (JA)

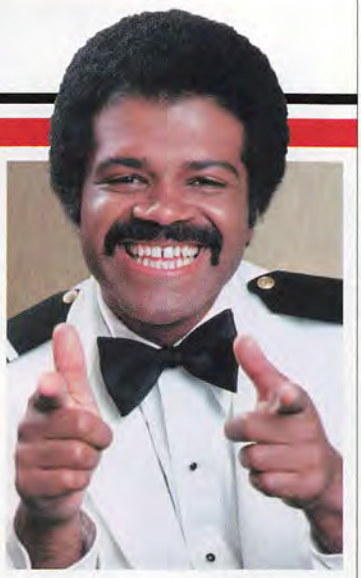
EXPERT ADVICE

ASK JENNA & ISAAC



She's an award-winning actress. He's matchmaker of the high seas. Together, they'll fix your dismal life

Q My girl calls her mom every day. It drives me nuts. How can I stop her?
Cut Those Apron Strings, Norfolk, VA

Jenna You have two choices: Cancel the phone or remove her ears. Seriously, you can't interfere with a mother-daughter relationship. Do so at your peril: The only thing you'll get is hate from her mom and a total pussy ban from your girl.

Isaac When she talks with her mom, ring a bell so she knows how often she does it. Or, whenever she calls her mom, call yours. She'll call you a wuss, but point out that you only do it when she does. Say you'll cut your apron strings when she cuts hers. The upside of this strategy is that your mom will love that you're calling her. That'll pay off at Christmas.

Q My girlfriend's redneck dad is always trying to challenge me: arm-wrestling, checkers, beer-guzzling—you name it. How can I make him stop?
Her Dad Totally Wants to Kick My Ass, Phoenix, AZ

Jenna Her dad has a macho-ego problem. He wants to show you who's the boss and to test you at the same time. But remember: Every beer-guzzling, trailer-dwelling father wants someone of the same mold for his little girl. Tease up your mullet, put on your favorite wife-beater and kick her old man's ass at these white-trash sports.

Isaac You can't please the dad because you're fucking his daughter. He only wants to humiliate you. If you let him beat you, you're a pussy. If you beat him, you're an asshole. Tell him he's being childish and refuse to play. Be firm. You'll hear a clanging in the background. That's your brass balls banging together when you tell that motherfucker no.

Q My girl is always borrowing money from me and she never pays it back. How can I get her to cough up the cash?
What Am I, a Bank?, San Jose, CA

Jenna Haven't you noticed that the money never makes its way back to you? In relationships, men are providers or, in modern terms, ATMs. Any money you give to her should be treated as a gift, not a loan. If you can't afford to give it to her, don't. Chalk up the money lost as a lesson learned and go forward from there.

Isaac In the business of love-making, this bitch is what we call a gold digger. Try to trick her into paying for dinner sometimes. Check her purse when she goes to the bathroom to see if she has her credit card, then pretend you forgot your wallet when the check arrives. Still, if you like the lovemaking process, recognize and accept the situation. Work it into your budget. But if you can find a hooker who's a little cheaper, go with that. You just have to figure out what you want out of life.

ARE YOU DIDDLED BY LOVE?

If a relationship problem is poisoning your already wretched personal life, seek advice from the experts at Ask Jenna & Isaac, FHM, 110 Fifth Ave., New York, NY 10011.

SWINE FEAST

Roasting box turns dead animals into succulence

According to PETA, 291 million turkeys were slaughtered in the U.S. last year. Yet only 133 million pigs ended up on plates. To address this injustice, FHM set to roasting a hog in La Caja China, the Chinese box. This cooker purports to do a pig in a mere three and a half hours, the same time it takes the Texas Rangers to lose.

Cooking with the box is easy. The pig—or your flesh of choice—goes inside, while coals sit on top. All you have to do is wait, perhaps while drinking beer.

Sadly, FHM's roast took five hours. That's because we tried to roast our pig on a rooftop in subzero temperatures. That's not advised. Nor is disposing the post-feast carcass in your kitchen trash. Women hate that.

But the taste? Best pig ever. (SB)

BUG FIGHT!

Fear Factor plebs aren't the only ones who eat bugs. Other bugs do too

Making it to the top of most professions takes time, money and, apparently, a penis. But not snapping bugs with a scanning electron microscope. To be the best at that, you have to bury pets.

"To collect bugs, I buried a dog in a local park," says Volker Steger, the photographer of Buzz: The Intimate Bond Between Humans and Insects. "When I dug it up, there was a smell, but lots of beetles."

Steger's ends justify his means. To create these images, he first kills his prey using ether-dipped swabs or liquid hydrogen to stun the beasts. Next, he coats them in a mixture of silver and platinum before scanning them with an electron beam. The result is a monochrome image, which Steger colors digitally.

"Watching flies fight is my favorite—it's like a World War II dogfight," Steger says. "And if you want to get two ants from the same family to fight, just touch one of them. Your smell causes the other ant to not recognize his friend. Then it attacks."

Not all insects are so much fun. "Maggots are the most disgusting bugs," Steger says. "I got my girlfriend to hold a bunch of them for one shot. She didn't like me very much." (SB)

'GO, GO GADGET WHEEL!'

Trash your car. Burn your bike. Go unicycle

No matter what clowns say, unicycles are no good. Hippies ride them. And so do jugglers. In the future, however, they'll rule the roads. The Embrio is the reason.

This one-wheeled beast is being developed by Canadian leisure vehicle gurus Bombardier. It employs gyroscopic technology to keep you upright on its single wheel, and being eco-friendly, a fuel cell provides the juice. Sadly, it's still only a concept. But the Canadians expect to have it ready by the year 2025, by which time it'll have been superseded by the flying space pod. (GB)

'MY COLOSTOMY BAG HELL!'

Matt Prost, 26, is dependent on his pouch

Why did you need the bag?
I was diagnosed with fulminant colitis and my large intestine was removed. The bag saved my life.
Can you smell it?
Only sometimes.
How does it work?
Within a couple of hours of eating something, it comes out uncontrollably. I have to stay away from peanuts, popcorn and pulp. I ate a Snickers once and paid for it dearly.
How do you sleep?
I position the bag carefully. I've had a couple nights when it has spilled out.

Q&A

HUGH JACKMAN

The Van Helsing star on wearing pigtails and disabling the homeless

You're rocking the hippie hair for Van Helsing. Did your wife give you any tips on how to maintain such lovely locks?
The problem with hair extensions is that they hurt like someone pulling on your pubes. Every time you roll over in bed, you wake up because it feels like someone's yanking your hair out. The first night, I got no sleep. The second night, my wife put my hair in a bun. But I sleep on my back, so the bun didn't work. I ended up with pigtails like Pippi Longstocking.

This monster movie was shot in Prague. Word is they have the most authentic angry village people there.
They're the best peasant extras in the world because they use people from homeless shelters. And they're great. We have a scene with 300 dancers doing this synchronized ballroom dance. Learning ballroom dancing is compulsory in Czech education, so what would have cost a fortune in the U.S. because you would have needed trained dancers, was easy. They turned up on the day of shooting and 300 of them were in perfect unison.

With all your stunts, how did you manage to keep from getting good and injured?
I'm not sure. There was lots of flying around on wires. For one scene, we have 500 extras running all over the place. Of course, you can't choreograph that. You call action, they all scream and begin running for two minutes. In those two minutes, I knocked over at least six people every take. On the eighth take, this man who must have weighed only 100 pounds ran into my path. I knocked him over, and he broke his hand. I tried to run over to him, but he kept running away. He thought I was going to fire him. All I wanted to do was say I was sorry. (AW)

TOP NOTES

The month's releases faster than Coldplay makes girls cry

> Ghostface The Pretty Toney Album DEF JAM

Wu-Tang soldier Ghostface Killah isn't famous for going to jail and he doesn't mix with film types. Instead, he focuses on making heads bounce. "Tush," the first radio single from The Ironman's fifth solo album, features Missy Elliott and fun.

> Everlast White Trash Beautiful ISLAND/DEF JAM

FHM*: "Who's more white trash: Kid Rock or Uncle Kracker?" Everlast: "Hands down, Kid Rock. If he's faking, I'd be the first to tell you. Uncle Kracker is down with the squad but he's coming off the bench."

> Trey Anastasio Seis De Mayo ELEKTRA

Phish's guitarist offers fans a solo instrumental album. The seven tracks feature new tunes and lush reworkings of Phish material with strings, brass and an orchestra. That's what hippies play when they're trying to get laid.

> Dokken Hell to Pay CMC/SANCTUARY

Really, it's Dokken's world. We're simply living in it. The rock warriors offer their 10th studio album to mankind. After lineup changes, Don Dokken's howl is now backed by the guitar of Jon Levin—who doubles as the band's attorney.

> Toots and the Maytals True Love V2

The reggae legend re-records 15 hits with help from his fans. It helps that they include Keith Richards, No Doubt, Ryan Adams and Willie Nelson and not some white Rasta who thinks his bongo-bashing is useful.

> Janet Jackson Damita Jo VIRGIN

Of the burlesque starlet's latest album, producer Dallas Austin has said, "It's a really sexy record, but not in a sensual way." Exactly like copping a handful of bejeweled chesticle when you least expect it.

> Shakira Live & Off the Record EPIC

FHM*: "Your latest is a live DVD-and-CD set. Doesn't playing night after night get dull?" Shakira: "No way. I'm happy onstage. There are two places in the world where I feel uninhibited: one is onstage, the other is the bathroom."

> Eric Clapton Me & Mr. Johnson REPRISE

Aging guitar hero plays the songs of long-dead guitar hero. Here, Eric Clapton covers 14 of Robert Johnson's classic blues laments—great tunes, all—but why? If you're a middle-aged, white-collar guy, perhaps you'll feel Eric's pain.

> Patti Smith Trampin' COLUMBIA

After 29 years of poetic lady-moping, this legend's hair still refuses to sell out and get a decent wash and blow-dry. The 11 meaning-laden tracks here are perfect for bedding women who are both smarter and older than you. You mom's one cool friend, for example.

> Fear Factory Archetype LIQUID 8

Screw the baggy-shorters: These guys have been perfecting their Ministry-meets-Slayer sound for years. On this, it's heavier than ever. The single "Cyberwaste" is vicious.

SHAKIRA

The Colombian booty queen talks tight pants, mobile buttocks and Britney's midriff

Your new CD-and-DVD pack is Live & Off the Record. How do you stop your pants from splitting when you perform?
They're reinforced. They did rip once, not during the last tour, but it did happen. It was a small rip, but it made me think about coming up with a solution. That's when we decided to reinforce my pants and make sure the inner thigh is stretchy.

How do you stay in such excellent shape?
It's not that great.

It is.
Honestly, I don't remember the last time I went to a gym. I try not to eat carbohydrates at night, but last night I ordered a huge hamburger and fries. My live show helps me watch my weight.

We decided to reinforce my pants and make sure the inner thigh is stretchy

That's because you wiggle so much. Who shakes a better butt: you or J.Lo?
Of course it's J.Lo! I've got a good butt-shake, too—butt-shaking is in my blood. But she really is a sex symbol. People are always trying to put me in that category, but I don't feel I fit.

OK, who's better: you or Britney?
We come from different backgrounds and are two different artists. I think she's great. Any artist who has the courage to reveal herself in front of thousands of people deserves all the respect in the world. We're both hard-working, determined and blond, but she definitely has a better stomach than I do. Believe me, I've seen it.

Shakira's* Live & Off the Record *is out now.

MONIKERS

LEARN WITH ROCK

Bookish band names educate

Don't waste money on a liberal-arts college education: Rock can take care of that. Study where some bands get their names and you'll never need to read again.

Ween Drinking Olde English 800 is a great way to spend four years, but studying old English at college is a bore. The words may as well be foreign. "Ween" is one of them: It's an archaic synonym for the verb "to think."

And You Will Know Us by the Trail of Dead The noise merchants' name comes from a prayer to the Mayan god of corn: "We will act as your sword, oh Great Itzamna/ And you will know us by the trail of dead."

Dido Like the singer, this character of Greek mythology whined about love. In Virgil's Aeneid, Dido humps a guy called Aeneas in a cave, thinking that will lead to marriage. Silly—he dumps the bitch and splits town.

Brujeria This metal supergroup's name is Spanish for witchcraft. Historically, brujeria was the dark side of Santeria, a Cuban religion that blends Christianity and African beliefs. Today, Cubans put their faith in overpacked dinghies.

Incubus The mope rockers' moniker comes from the name of male demons who have sex with women while they sleep. It was thought the attacks were the result of sin or curses. These days they call such demons "frat boys."

MAN ON FIRE

Kidnappers deserve to die. Denzel Washington helps them do it

The blind man reached for his seeing-eye child

Denzel is the bodyguard. Dakota Fanning is the little rich girl he's sworn to protect. "It's an unusual love story," says director Tony Scott, creator of such past action masterpieces as Top Gun and Spy Game. "When Dakota's finally kidnapped, it tears you apart. The audience knows it's a kidnapping movie, so they sit there, waiting for the hammer to drop. Then Denzel goes after all the guys responsible."

>The Punisher ARTISAN

Thomas Jane, John Travolta, Rebecca Romijn-Stamos

After his family is killed by criminals, The Punisher doles out vigilante-style justice. Sure it sounds like Batman, but The Punisher is totally different. Instead of a bat on his chest, he has a big skull.
Get this The film's set in Tampa, FL, so look for cameos from local hockey stars Vinny Lecavalier and Brad Richards.

> Mean Girls PARAMOUNT

Lindsay Lohan, Lacey Chabert, Tina Fey

Saturday Night Live's Tina Fey has penned a comedy about the way high school girls are vicious, two-faced popularity whores. As opposed to grown-up women, who are always straightforward and even-keeled.
Get this The film draws inspiration from a book called Queen Bees and Wannabes, which helps parents deal with teen girls.

> Van Helsing UNIVERSAL

Hugh Jackman, Kate Beckinsale, Richard Roxburgh

According to lore, Van Helsing was Dracula's slayer, yet this movie also pits him against Frankenstein, Mr. Hyde and the Wolfman. It's great for fans who like their monsters in bulk—Sam's Club–style.
Get this NBC has already ordered a pilot that will be set in the film's world, but it will feature different characters.

> New York Minute WB

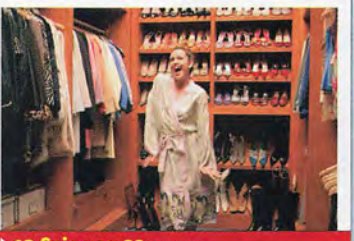
Mary-Kate Olsen, Ashley Olsen, Eugene Levy

Identical twins, a truancy officer and the kidnapping of a senator's dog. Sounds like award-winning cinema. Grab your raincoat and hit the midnight screening.
Get this The twins have made 47 direct-to-video films that have sold 40 million copies. No wonder each one is worth a cool $150 million.

> The Alamo TOUCHSTONE

Billy Bob Thornton, Jason Patric, Dennis Quaid

The final stand of Sam Houston and Davy Crockett reminds us there was a time when the people of Mexico streamed across our borders to do far more devious things than harvest seasonal crops at substandard wages.
Get this The film's 51-acre set in Texas was the largest ever built in North America.



> 13 Going on 30 COLUMBIA

Jennifer Garner, Mark Ruffalo, Andy Serkis

This could be the fictional story of a teenage girl who wishes she were more grown-up and then awakes in the body of a middle-aged woman. Or it could be the true story of Renée Zellweger's recent changes in dress size.
Get this Garner snagged $3 million for her first starring role.

Q&A

KEVIN POLLAK

The Whole Ten Yards co-star on poker play and Jack Nicholson's ass

The Whole Ten Yards* is the sequel to The Whole Nine Yards. How long did it take the producers to come up with that title?
Actually it went to a think tank at MENSA, and they labored on it for six weeks. They're geniuses, so far be it from me to question.

You do legendary celebrity impressions. Has a celeb you do ever told you to fuck off?
No, but I have fun at other people's expense. I call Alan Arkin's voicemail and leave a message like, [Adopts Alan Arkin's voice] "Um, memo to myself. Let's see, I know there was something. Oh yes, check on the truck for Tony." Then I get a call, like, two days later, "Hey, it's Alan. You know, that's not funny."

Is it true your mom was all over Jack Nicholson on the set of A Few Good Men?
She visited during the courtroom scene. Jack was on the stand and the camera was over his right shoulder shooting out over the courtroom. There was no place to put my mom, so they sat her over Nicholson's other shoulder. It freaked me out because she was in my eye line. Nicholson saw how unnerved I was. Being somewhat of a screw-off who pretty much looked stoned every day, he said to me, "Hey, kid, can you could do me a favor? Could you get your mom off my ass?"

What was your answer?
I said, "You can't handle my mom!"

Why did they tap you to host Bravo's Celebrity Poker Showdown? Are you a shark?
I play with the pros out in Vegas as often as possible. While I was shooting Casino, I was stuck in Vegas for about 20 weeks and I discovered this poker room. It became a great education, but it cost me a lot of money too. Now that I've been playing for 15 years, I'm embraced as one of them as opposed to being the new fish.

On the set of The Usual Suspects, did you have any idea what Benicio Del Toro was saying?
Never. In fact, the line in the movie where I go, "What did he just say?" was Kevin Pollak the actor talking, not my character. That was me literally trying to stop the scene by asking what the hell he had just said.

You've been in tons of films. What's the worst?
I've done 50 movies and you could throw a dart and find a few, but I think it's important that the first movie you're in be the worst one. I accomplished that. It was called Million Dollar Mystery. It was so bad it opened on an airplane, on flights between New York and Boston, so you had to have a roundtrip ticket to see the whole thing.

You're making that up.
Yes, but it's funny. (TP)

FIVE THINGS . . .

. . . you didn't know about the Marx brothers

1 The three brothers got their stage names from a vaudevillian. Leonard became Chico (pronounced Chick-o) because of his fondness for the ladies, Adolph was dubbed Harpo because he played the harp and Julius was named Groucho after the bag that he hid his money in, which was called a grouch bag. Adolph/Harpo later took it one step further when he changed his real name to Arthur in order to avoid any connection to Hitler.

2 After the collapse of the USSR, the former Soviet Republic of Abkhazia celebrated by releasing stamps of Groucho Marx and John Lennon—as opposed to Karl Marx and Vladimir Lenin.

3 Groucho was a renowned misogynist, who needled his three wives with insults until each left him and two became alcoholics. This attitude might be related to the fact that the night he lost his virginity he also contracted gonorrhea.

4 Chico had a serious gambling problem and one of the worst Marx brothers films, A Night in Casablanca, was made to pay his gaming debts. It's also rumored that when gangster Bugsy Siegel was killed, there was a check from Chico inside his wallet.

5 By the late 1930s, Groucho's trademark mustache, eyebrows and cigar had become so recognizable that he considered himself secondary and didn't always show up to photo shoots. Thus the poster for the 1940 film Go West features Chico and Harpo alongside a writer in Groucho makeup. (JD)

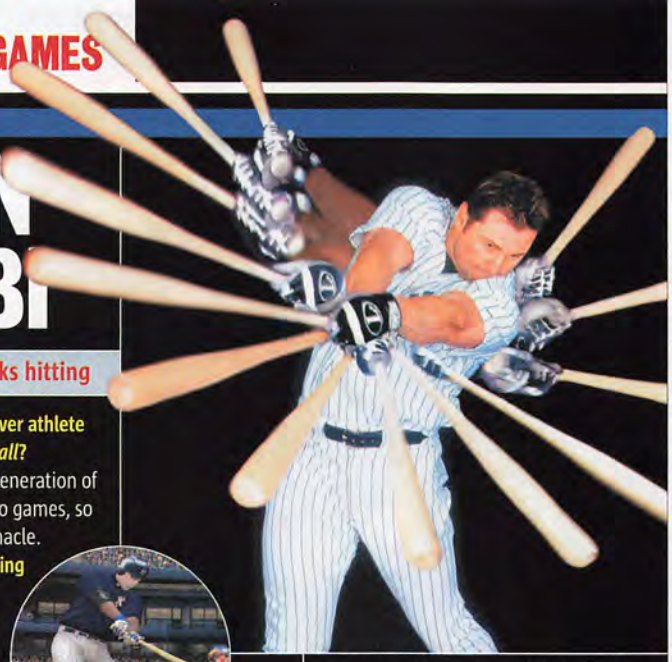
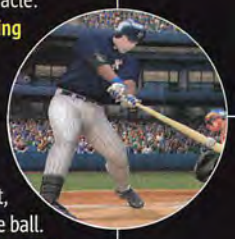
JASON GIAMBI

The Yankee big stick talks hitting



How do you like being the cover athlete for ESPN Major League Baseball?
It's a dream come true. My generation of players grew up playing video games, so to be on the cover is the pinnacle.

So what's the secret to knocking one out of the park?
Bat speed and reading the pitch. Bat speed is all about exercising the lower back, abs and obliques. Big biceps and triceps are great to look at, but they're not going to hit the ball.



Big biceps are great to look at, but they're not going to hit the ball

Which pitchers don't you like facing?
Pedro's no fun, neither is Randy Johnson. It's not too fun facing my old buddies on the A's either.

Any tips for predicting the pitch?
Reading the pitch is like a game within the game. Sometimes you pick up on little things a pitcher does in his motion, or you can see which way the seams on the ball are moving and you make the appropriate adjustment with your bat. It comes down to the count too. If it's 2 and 1, should I be looking for a changeup or a breaking ball? Then there's the release point—the moment the ball leaves the pitcher's hand. A lot of pitchers try to disguise their throws by keeping the release point the same for each pitch. Some guys throw sliders instead of curves because the slider's release point is the same as the fastball, making it really tough to predict.

Does that apply to the Tim Wakefield knuckleball?
You're better off trying to hit Wakefield when you're in a drunken stupor. There's no rhyme or reason. Sometimes it ducks in, sometimes it ducks out or goes down. It never does the same thing twice, so you just go up there and hack away. (DG)

BRISTOW 2.0

Jenny's jugs bounce onto consoles

As Sydney Bristow on Alias, Jennifer Garner is like your mom on a trip to Hedonism—she gets to play dress up, looks incredible in leather and will get violent if you ask her to. Producer Patrik McCormack reveals how his team "encapsulated Sydney's tough yet sexy image" for the Alias game.

Body Work
After an Alias-watching session to rival the Gilmore Girls marathons at your place, the team started with a wire-frame model. "We constructed a full body and facial skeleton that would serve as the infrastructure for the motion-capture animation."

Wardrobe
With more costume changes per episode than a goth teenager makes before school, the next step was to call in the Alias costume designer. According to McCormack, "Players will have tons of outfits to choose from for different scenarios."

Detail
At this point, the model was starting to take shape. "But it still lacked the beauty and realism of the TV character," McCormack says. "Fortunately, we secured a photo shoot with Garner to capture a high-quality reference for mapping textures."

Motion
Next was making Sydney move. "Motion-capturing involved auditions, rehearsals, prop construction and weeks of cut-scene and stunt shoots," he says. "We used stunt doubles trained in Krav Maga, an Israeli style of martial arts used in the show."

Speech
What's a woman without all the yapping? "After reading several hours of dialogue with Garner in the studio we'd finished our virtual Sydney," McCormack says. "Now tell me, who wouldn't want to spend hours playing around with her?" (DLT)

JOKE OF THE MONTH

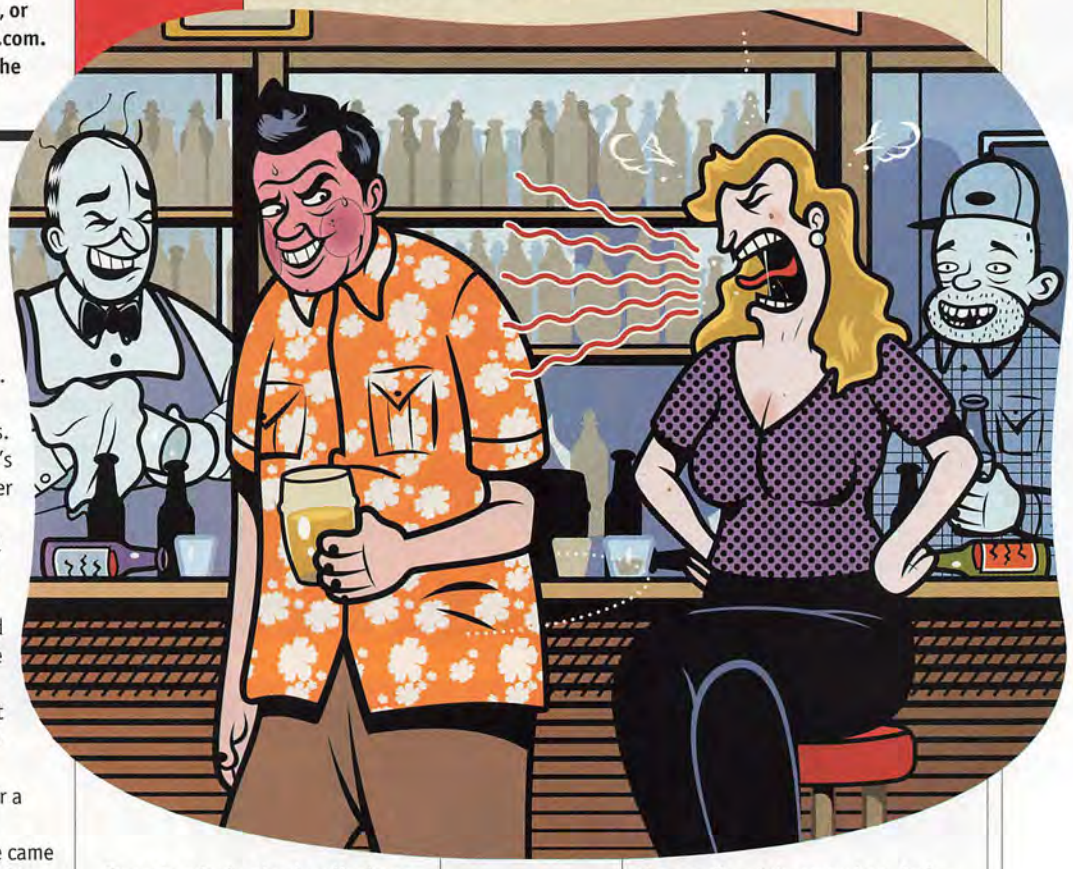
A guy walks into a bar and sees a beautiful woman sitting by herself. He goes over and asks if she would like to join him for a drink. Before he's had a chance to get all the words out, she screams, "No, I won't sleep with you tonight!"

Everyone in the bar turns to stare, and the guy slinks back to his table, dejected. After a few minutes, the woman walks over to the guy and apologizes for her outburst.

"I'm very sorry if I embarrassed you. I'm a psychology student conducting a study on how people respond to embarrassing situations."

On hearing this, the man nods quietly and, at the top of his lungs, yells out, "What do you mean $200?"

Brett Liddiard, Utica, NY



A young man starts working at a department store. After his first day, the manager asks him how many sales he has made.

"Only one, sir," the salesman says.

"Pathetic!" the boss screams. "How much was it worth?"

"It was $300,000," he replies.

"Young man, that's the store's biggest sale ever!" the manager says. "How did you do that?"

"Well, first I sold him a small fishhook, then a medium one and finally a large one," the salesman explains. "Then I sold him a short line, a medium one then a long one. After that, I sold him a 20-foot powerboat and then a new Hummer so he could tow it."

"And the guy only came in for a fishhook?" the manager asks.

"No," the salesman says. "He came in for tampons for his wife. I said, 'Well, your weekend is fucked. You might as well go fishing.'"

A woman is worried that her man is losing interest in sex. To spice things up, she cooks his favorite meal and sends him off with his buddies for a night on the town. Before he leaves, she tells him that when he gets home, she'll be wearing sexy lingerie.

Hours later, he returns drunk and says, "Get your panties off, baby."

Turned on by her husband's change of passions, she lustily obliges.

"Now, honey, I want you to do a handstand in front of the mirror for me and keep your mouth shut."

She does as he asks. Slowly he puts his face between her legs, turns to the mirror and says, "The guys were right—a beard wouldn't suit me at all."

Two men's carts collide in a supermarket. "Sorry," says the first man, "I was looking for my wife."

"That's a coincidence," replies the second man, "I've lost my wife too!"

"Let's work together," the first guy says. "What does yours look like?"

"She's tall, has blond hair, firm tits and a tight ass. What about yours?"

The first guy thinks for a second, then replies, "Ah, screw her—let's look for yours instead!"

CRAIG KILBORN

The Late Late Show host on throwing balls at the handicapped, ignoring the famous and teaching traffic laws to Devo

You seem to have slimmed down your already impressive physique. Did you switch to low-carb cocktails?

I believe tequila, which is made from the agave plant, is not as fattening as vodka, which is made from potatoes. So I go tequila.

What sets you apart from the other late-night talk-show hosts?

All of those guys are quick with the comebacks. I could be quicker but I don't say the first or even second thing that comes to mind. I say the third thing—because the first two are meanspirited. Also, I'm the only one who can dunk.

Did that come in handy when you tried out for the Minnesota Timberwolves last October?

As I said to the head coach, "Why didn't you ask me to try out 10 years ago when I was still in shape?" He said, "Nobody knew who you were 10 years ago." I used to be able to shoot the lights out, but a jump shot's like a woman: If you ignore her, she'll leave you—and my jump shot has left me. I did make a hell of a pass though; a one-handed no-look to Kevin Garnett. Only three people can make that: Magic, me and Larry. But I could be wrong.

Did you just want to show up the desk jockeys at SportsCenter?

Oh, that's right! I used to work at ESPN.

What was SportsCenter like?

I kept to myself. One of the producers said, "Look at Craig, he's so happy just doing his job." Little did he know I was ready to leave.

What was the best line you ever used during a highlight?

"Happiness is Bristol, CT, in your rearview mirror." No—that's not mine. Hakeem Olajuwon had anemia. When he came back, I showed a highlight of him hitting a jumper. I said, "Oh, the red cell count is up!" Then he hit another jumper and I said, "Oh, hemoglobin!"

You played college ball for Montana State. What was your best dunk?

I didn't dunk in college. For me to dunk, everything had to be perfect: the lighting, the air, my sneakers. The guys had to wait; I had to travel. I couldn't just do it at the drop of a hat.

> For me to dunk, everything had to be perfect: the lighting, the air, my sneakers. The guys had to wait; I had to travel

Were you pulling a lot of wool when you were on the team?

Absolutely not. I was a late bloomer. I think two of the male cheerleaders were straight, and they did better than I did.

Ever get humiliated on court?

I threw a no-look scoop pass at three-quarters court and it sailed over my teammate's head. Underneath the basket they always had guys in wheelchairs. Everyone in the arena could see that the ball was going right at the guy in the wheelchair. He couldn't move, and it hit him. When I tell the story now, the part I add is: After the ball hit him, he got up and walked. Yeah!

Have you ever been one for pulling pranks?

I think pranks are a waste of time. We all love George Clooney. I think it's cute that he has a pig as a pet. No I don't—I think it's ridiculous. But I hear he does these practical jokes. Maybe I'm just lazy, but who wants to go to all that effort? Why don't you just say something biting and walk off? That's what I do.

Do you have any stalkers?

There are stalkers. I don't get freaked out about that. I had them at The Daily Show and I have them here. If they're hot, we can work something out.

The show recently had its 1,000th episode. What's the freakiest shit you've seen a guest do?

Last month Jolene Blalock, the girl from Star Trek: Enterprise, flashed me. She's got an interesting figure. The first time she was on, she jumped up on the desk and was writhing around. At the end of the interview last month, I said, "What are you going to do to top that?" She stood in front of my desk and faced the audience, then flipped up her skirt to show me her backside.

Nice. Do you hang out with other celebrities a lot?

I don't rub elbows. I went to Beverly Hills for steak after the NBA All-Star game. I went through the back way because I don't valet. I parked and went in through the kitchen. Kind of cool. At the back table downstairs was Kobe Bryant and his wife. Guess what I did? I kept walking. I don't bother people.

What was the crappiest job you had before hitting it big?

I worked at an Italian restaurant in Santa Monica, CA. I held the wine glasses wrong, and I didn't know what pesto was. When I was hungry and a customer hadn't eaten his manicotti, I'd eat it in the kitchen.

Didn't you also work as some sort of comedy traffic-school teacher? What was that about?

It was called California Comedy Traffic School. Eight hours, you go there, you talk about traffic, you show a traffic movie. This is what I got away with: I would show one of two traffic movies, Planes, Trains and Automobiles or Midnight Run.

Would you do improv for them?

We would play a game. They would have to say, "Hi, my name is Andrew and I'm a traffic violator. I was caught speeding." Then they'd have to say what they did for a living. One guy said, "I'm a musician in a band." I go, "What band?" He goes, "Devo." That was fun.

Your voice is hypnotizing. Ever put your golden pipes to work on the karaoke circuit?

I think karaoke is a big waste of time. I'm a party pooper when it comes to some of these things. Can I give you a list? Karaoke, video games and celebrity poker—I was invited, but I didn't play. I used to play golf but I was so mediocre that I don't play anymore. I'd embarrass myself. I don't ski. I only have one car. I don't like roller coasters. I just want to sit under a palm tree at my house and take a nap.

How much do you bench?

When I was in college, I benched 215 and I weighed only 185. In your face! In your face!

How about now?

I don't know. It's not much. I'd be lucky to put up 120. I'm kind of atrophying. FHM

Gemini (May 21 – June 21)

Women assume Gemini guys are unreliable, overextended and most of all, fickle. That's because there are two brains at work with Geminis, and not in a good way.

The good news Geminis are also known for being bright, witty and ahead of the times—you loved The Office before the hype.

Your best move Downplay your inability to choose between Chinese or Italian. That way she won't inadvertently think you're an irresolute bastard. Instead, mind your behavior and beware of situations that bring out such indecisiveness. Steer clear of Quizno's. There's no right choice when you're faced with all those delicious toasted subs.

THE STARS OF SEX

There's nothing more bonkers than a woman's obsession with horoscopes. Here's how to use it to your advantage

BY NORA ZELEVANSKY

PHOTOGRAPHY BY LUCIANA PAMPALONE

While men are rational enough to realize that the positioning of the moon has zero effect on their behavior, women are an entirely different story. More than any doctor, shrink or cabal of gossipy friends, it's the preposterous stargazings of dried-up hippies on which women rely when it comes to relationship advice. Such poor judgment deserves constant belittling, but it's also something men can take advantage of. Read on to learn exactly what zodiac-obsessed ladies assume about you based solely on your date of birth, and forever use it to avoid premature evacuations.

Leo (July 23 – August 23)

Women assume Leo guys are vain, flirtatious and really into their hair—just like the one named DiCaprio.
The good news Leos are powerful, entertaining and extraordinarily influential.
Your best move Take it easy with the primping and the flirting. While looking good is the key to catching a woman's eye, if you spend more than 10 minutes in the bathroom on anything other than bowel movements, she'll be skeptical. Also, avoid even casual conversations with female waitresses and bartenders as they will be interpreted as sexual overtures. If she wants you in spite of all that, prepare to spend a lot of time on top. Leos need to feel like the dominant lions they are.

Virgo (August 24 – September 22)

Women assume Virgo guys are cleanliness-obsessed control freaks.
The good news Virgos are also artistic types with passion and sensitivity—aka chick magnets. If you're prone to quoting films other than Super Troopers or even if you've been in the same multiplex that has shown Lost in Translation, then you're standard-issue Virgo.
Your best move Take it easy, dude. Don't freak out when she picks up one of your Lord of the Rings figurines—you can reposition it when she goes home—and let it go if she spills an entire glass of red wine on your freshly cleaned white shirt. You don't want to trip that zodiac wire in her head. Kaboom.

Cancer (June 22 – July 22)

Women assume Cancer guys are moody, couch-bound homebodies who are breast-obsessed and sometimes suffer from an Oedipus-caliber mother complex.
The good news Cancers are deeply emotional and very intuitive, kind of like a Jedi. ("These aren't the boobs you're looking for.")
Your best move Get off the couch, don't answer Mom's incessant phone calls and make like a social butterfly. Take your cleavage-baring honey to a snazzy party, mingle with beautiful people and pour yummy cocktails down her throat. Her fears of your bad Cancer traits will be quashed, and she may even let you drive your landspeeder through her supernovas.

Scorpio

(October 24 - November 22)

Women assume Scorpio guys are overtly jealous and basically off their rockers when it comes to girls and relationships.
The good news All these seemingly bad qualities make these same ladies want to have sex with a Scorpio.
Your best move Try showing any easygoing qualities you might have—maybe suggest a round of miniature golf or a game of cards. Keep it light and lively. No stories about ex-girlfriends—and don't even mention the elaborate plan you used to embarrass the political theory professor who gave you a C on your final exam. Nothing puts the kibosh on a burgeoning sexual encounter like a restraining order.

Libra

(September 23 - October 23)

Women assume Libra guys are manipulative, disingenuous and at worst, sociopaths.
The good news Libras are everybody's best friend and masters of all things social.
Your best move Think before saying, "Whatever, babe," to any emotionally charged questions posed by members of the opposite sex. Given your astrological penchant for screwing people over, she needs to trust that you aren't playing games—or her. Screw the three-day rule: Return her calls and e-mails promptly and be clear about your intentions. Since social Libras are fantastic party-throwers, invite her to your next one. She's sure to come.

Sagittarius

(November 23 - December 21)

Women think Sagittarius guys are smooth-talking commitment-phobes who can't make or stick to a plan to save their lives.
The good news Sagittarians are risk-takers and avid travelers who are always interested in learning something new.
Your best move Experiment with sincerity. Horoscope-wise women will not swallow your sweet nothings—or anything else of yours—without some serious groundwork. Flattery will get you nowhere, so lay off the sugary speech and just talk to her—about Spinal Tap and beer pong. If that isn't a recipe for getting it on, then we don't know what is.

Capricorn men:
Sometimes a very public tongue tango is the only way to go

Capricorn

(December 22 - January 19)

Women think Capricorn guys are critical and emotionally retarded—definitely more friend than boyfriend material.
The good news Capricorns are also known to be funny and laid-back.
Your best move Show your true desires. Watch such mixed signals as giving her chaste hugs (one-armed hip-hop embraces are the worst) or inviting her to dinner and asking other people to come along. She's not going to believe you're into her unless you make it abundantly clear—sometimes a very public tongue tango is the only way to go. Don't be her in-case-of-emergency date. Make her break the glass and take you home instead.

Aquarius

(January 20 - February 18)

Women think Aquarius guys are socially isolated, a little mad and sometimes suffer from delusions of grandeur.
The good news They are also very creative and powerful (six U.S. presidents have been Aquarius men).
Your best move Integrate her into your life. Every time you blow her off to discuss your fantasy baseball team with your friends, you might as well be saying, "Screw you, bitch. I'm not interested in spending my valuable time with you." To get her to kneel at the temple of you, put your team on autopilot and surprise her with a romantic weekend getaway. Or at least take her out to some place nicer than Papa John's.

Pisces

(February 19 - March 20)

Women assume Pisces guys are cruelly insightful and as moody as a 13-year-old girl.

The good news Pisces men can also be sweet, charming gentlemen who are exceedingly concerned with a woman's sexual pleasure.

Your best move Watch your mouth—and your moods. Snide comments that make your buddies double over faster than Curb Your Enthusiasm may make her think you don't mean anything you say. Also, no more coming home with a broken 3-wood every time you tee off into the woods. Don't worry though. You're thought to be an attentive lover, so you'll probably hit that, no matter how annoying you are.

Pisces men: You're thought to be an attentive lover, so you'll probably hit that

Aries

(March 21 – April 20)

Women think Aries guys are sorry, selfish, serial flirts who always think they're right.

The good news Aries men don't have much to prove in bed as they're believed to be craftsmen with the tool. They're also known for being chivalrous.

Your best move Show her that you won't take her for granted. That means forget about getting toasted with your crew and expecting her to go spontaneously. And if you must flirt, do it sparingly and only with the woman you are with at the time. Play up the protective vibe. The next time you eye a crazy guy on the street, make sure to be in between her and him. Chicks dig that.

Taurus

(April 21 - May 20)

Women think Taurus guys are jealous, overpossessive and most of all, stubborn.

The good news Taurus dudes are eternally loyal and doting.

Your best move Give her some space. A chart-reading zealot might feel a little suffocated by any attempts to keep her close—such as asking to tag along to happy hour with her friends from work. While she may eventually adore your finer qualities (though probably not until you give her a ring), in the beginning, play it cool. Otherwise she'll think you're a stalker waiting to happen. FHM

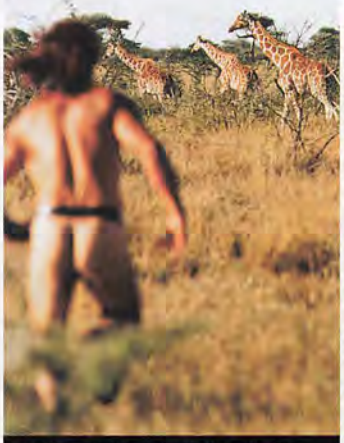
WILD BOYZ IN AFRICA

Blood drinking, scorpion taunting and rhino pleasuring: the spinoff of MTV's Jackass hits Kenya

BY JIMMY JELLINEK
PHOTOGRAPHY BY RONNIE ANDREN



Pontius sprints naked after giraffes

Pith helmets add scientific credibility

A tribal blood-chugging ritual leaves the boys caked in cow's blood

Steve-O wanders the airport shirtless

Pontius has an assistant tend to his thongs

At a remote Kenyan bush camp located smack-dab on the equator, Steve-O and Party Boy Chris Pontius are making like Ozzy Osbourne. They're supposed to be filming a solemn warrior initiation ritual of Kenya's Samburu tribe. Generally, this involves diluting warm cow's blood with milk, and then cautiously ingesting it. The plan quickly mutates, however, when Steve-O grabs the steaming jug of blood before it can be diluted and pours it down his throat. Instantly he begins to gag, then retch uncontrollably.

Pontius grabs for the jug. "My turn!" he yells before guzzling. "Tastes like barbecue sauce." Then his mouth erupts.

"Dude, you are so metal!" screams Steve-O, seeing the way blood has begun caking onto his co-star's chin.

The gentlemen of MTV's Wildboyz have created a total barf-o-rama. And they do it again, and again, and again to ensure the cameramen get the shot from every angle. Never before, outside of a high school girls' bathroom, has vomiting been so well documented.

Love in African airspace

The tone for FHM's three-day stint with the Wildboyz is set from the start, as the cast and crew gather in Terminal 4 of London's Heathrow airport for the nine-hour flight to Nairobi, Kenya. Filming hasn't even officially begun, yet Pontius has already pissed his pants. Steve-O, meanwhile, wanders the terminal with his shirt off, signing autographs and taking pictures with stewardesses. Diminutive Jackass favorite Wee-Man has joined the group for the Africa trip, and he is talking up a college girl who looks like Winona Ryder gone goth. It seems Wee-Man might score—until Steve-O grabs the girl's attention. A few hours later, the two are conspicuously sucking face on the airplane. They soon adjourn to the lavatory, leaving a suspicious British Airways flight attendant lurking at the door. "It was the first time I'd ever done it with a stranger in a plane," Steve-O later boasts.

The flight lands in Kenya at 9:30 a.m., and executive producer Trip Taylor gathers the crew for a pep talk before they go through customs. "We're guests here, so please try to keep a low profile," he says. "We don't want to make any enemies. And be on time."

Watching Wildboyz, you'd think all it took to make the show was a single friend with a camcorder, but there are actually three cameramen, a sound guy and a team of field producers, plus a local medic and a security expert. There's even a hair and wardrobe guy whose primary job seems to be sorting Party Boy's thongs.

The group's leader is executive producer and director Jeff Tremaine. He's the guy who masterminded Jackass and then realized a nature show would make the perfect follow-up. "I'm fulfilling a childhood dream," Tremaine says. "I'm a nature buff. When I watch TV, all I watch is the Discovery channel." In their first season, the Wildboyz visited seven countries, where they swam with great white sharks, nearly got eaten by bears, guzzled salmon sperm and drew an impressive 2 million viewers to MTV at 10 p.m. on Sunday nights.

Once cleared through customs, the crew jams into five Land Cruisers for a cramped, four-hour drive to Sweetwaters Game Reserve 150 miles north of Nairobi. The drive is tedious, but crew members nap at their own peril. "When we were filming Jackass, everyone would be afraid to fall asleep in the van because they knew when they did, someone would do something screwed up to them," Party Boy explains. Here in Africa, that often means being attacked by the Black Mamba—a sock puppet with a penchant for punching people in the face. Past favored van amusements include the Lombardi Slap—a schlong smack across the face—and then, of course, there's the dreaded

The rhino tug

Having arrived at the game reserve by mid-afternoon, the crew immediately gets to work even though they've been awake for nearly 24 hours straight. Steve-O, Pontius and Wee-Man receive their wardrobe for the trip: matching safari outfits with pith helmets that make them look like pedophilic Boy Scout leaders. The entire crew then gathers around the local guide for a mandatory safety meeting. They all must also sign a waiver before anything dangerous is attempted—a situation that seems to arise roughly every five minutes.

The crew finally gets down to business: They try to coax a half-tame rhinoceros named Morani into letting Steve-O rub its wiener. Like all the ignorance the show perpetrates, the stunt has been vetted by wildlife experts to ensure it won't harm the animal.

Steve-O creeps up on the rhino while soothingly calling its name, "Morani, Morani." After a few takes, the animal grows impatient and tries to bolt. Steve-O, his hand still firmly grasping rhino taint, screeches like a little girl, sending Morani into a panic. Pontius is irate.

"Goddamn it, Steve-O," he yells. "Don't scream like that." Party Boy looks like an angry housewife. "Steve-O's going to be responsible for my death," he says. "I know he is."

"The thing that's gonna kill us is my jumpiness," Steve-O confirms. "As long as you don't freak out, you'll be fine. I freak out."

It soon becomes apparent that Steve-O is afraid of just about everything. "He'll go in the van and whimper if there's something he doesn't want to do," Tremaine says. "Steve-O's fear is a hard thing to judge. He'll do a gainer off a four-story roof into a four-foot-deep swimming pool, yet we took him to a stupid bungee jump and he was scared shitless."

"I pussied out big-time on the bungee jump," admits Steve-O, who says he's even scared of roller coasters. The desire for attention, however, can best almost any fear. "You almost get jealous of the other guy," he says. "If one of us gets really great

Too sick for Jackass

Steve-O recalls the one stunt you'll never get to see

"For Jackass: The Movie I was like, 'Dude, I want a beer bong that forks into two hoses that can fit in my nostrils, so it's a nose beer bong.' We made it and poured a beer into my nose, but it just wasn't funny. So Knoxville says, 'Dude, shove it up your ass.' I lay down and plugged the hose into my butt. Knoxville poured in the beer and I kicked my legs. Once I got the rhythm of kicking right, my butt literally chugged the beer. No one could believe how much I chugged into my butt. I pulled out the hose and, still kicking, I said to the camera, 'I'm sorry Dad. I'm just trying to party.' And then I started farting beer and licking it off my legs. I stood up and in one blast about six ounces of beer flew out of my ass. The scene was so bad it wasn't even allowed on the DVD. I'll probably never do a butt chug again."

Steve-O's stunt was Knoxville's idea

footage, it lights a fire under the other one's ass."

"It's like on Jackass," Party Boy says, "whoever took the most risks had the best stuff. So we want to keep pushing it."

"We want to be remembered as the most badass motherfuckers with no particular talents who really make you happy," Steve-O says. "And we will pay the piper to make that happen."

Elephant shower

The next morning's call time is before dawn, yet everyone looks fresh as they head to Ol Jogi, a 67,000-acre ranch with lions, domesticated elephants, wild dogs and leopards on leashes. On the way, Pontius forces the driver to stop. He then strips down naked, cinches his balls in a leather belt and tears off across the plains after a herd of giraffes. A few minutes after arriving at Ol Jogi, he's nearly naked again, this time standing in his tighty whities with Steve-O and Wee-Man while elephants spray them with water. "I've never showered with another man, let alone two," quips Pontius from an ankle-deep mud puddle.

It's homoerotic scenes like this that has made Pontius and Steve-O the Maverick and Goose of basic cable. "There's been a lot of criticism about the show maybe being a little too gay, a little too ahead of its time," Pontius says. And the world hasn't even seen the most extreme scenes, such as the unaired footage of the two dancing naked together in the back of a van. "It's the gayest thing we've ever done," he says. "I lit my pubes on fire, and Steve-O bent over and lit his cigarette off the flame."

"Look, it's obvious that we're straight because we act so goddamn gay," Steve-O explains.

"The truth is, whatever you do, if you do it naked, it's way funnier," Party Boy confirms.

One person who fails to see the humor is Steve-O's father. "My dad doesn't like the gay shit at all," Steve-O says. "When I got a cock tattooed on my arm, he said it personally offended him." Even though you'd assume Steve-O had been raised by circus freaks, his father was vice president of Campbell Soup Company. "I was a rich kid," he admits. "I grew up all over the world. I spoke three languages by the time I was 4. But forgot them by the time I was 6." Dropping out of college to try to become a stuntman managed to alienate his old man, but Steve-O says the two have now found something to bond over: managing Steve-O's money.

Pontius lit his pubes on fire, and Steve-O bent over and lit a cigarette off the flame

For his part, Pontius was a high school dropout who spent most of his early-adult life riding skateboards, sleeping on friends' sofas and eating mac and cheese. His mom, Christine Pontius, doesn't mind her son flashing his bare ass all over basic cable. "I think it's hilarious," she said when reached at home. "We care more about his safety. I have no idea where he is half the time." She then expressed shock at learning that, after Kenya, her boy had visited war-ravaged Rwanda.

Scorpion petting zoo

By noon, the equatorial heat has sapped everyone. Steve-O retreats to the truck, where a medic feeds him hydration powder and wraps him in a blanket. That leaves Pontius and Wee-Man to pick up the slack. For humor value, production has secured the services of a pygmy who looks like Wee-Man's African twin. The crew dubs him the Wee-Ranger.

Production has also hired a bug wrangler to bring along a collection of indigenous insects capable of tormenting the boys. The fact that the wrangler knows the venom level of every insect gives the proceedings an air of quasi-safety. Nonetheless, Wee-Man is not overly psyched about the prospect of being stung by a scorpion. "You've got to give me a second here," he begs.

This is where Tremaine comes in. He's not afraid to berate the boys until they take the pain. "We hate being called pussies," Pontius says. "I don't want to be told how bad something could screw me up; I want to find out for myself. We're doing our best when it hurts the worst." To help Wee-Man overcome his fears, Pontius instructs his friend to close his eyes. Then he grabs the Wee-Hand and thrusts it at the scorpion. "We do this all the time when we're afraid of something," he says.

The boys party with the tribe

Eventually, the scorpion strikes. "Ahhh, fuck!" screams Wee-Man, running off while clutching his hand. But it's not over.

"Do it again," a cameraman orders. "The shot wasn't clean."

Warrior dance party

The next morning, the group meets up with the Samburu tribe, who will take the boys through a batch of traditional warrior initiation rituals. But first things first: All of the Samburu warriors must line up and sign a waiver form allowing their image to be used on television. Once the paperwork is finished, they quickly bust out bees to sting the boys and ants to bite their nipples.

Pontius scares everyone during a branding ritual when he jams a hot coal against his arm while yelling, "C'mon, burn the shit out of me!" Tremaine, for once, begs him to quit and then sends Party Boy to get his bubbling flesh checked by the medic. In another nod to safety, the cow, whose blood the boys will soon guzzle then regurgitate, has been vaccinated.

The cow became a tasty rib dinner

After the warriors slaughter the cow and the Wildboyz spew its blood, filming comes to an end. The crew will spend the night with the villagers, camped under the African sky—and several layers of mosquito netting. The villagers quickly turn the cow into Flintstones-sized ribs, and they pass out homemade honey beer that has bees still floating in the fermented broth.

The sun sets and baboons begin screeching from nearby trees. Everyone is near collapse, except for Steve-O. Sitting in the mess tent, he screams the words, "Satan I sacrifice," over and over again as Deicide blasts from a portable radio. Tired of telling him to "shut the fuck up," the crew abandons him to bed. It's been a 14-hour day and nobody's in the mood.

The African warriors begin dancing to Michael Jackson's 'Wanna Be Startin' Somethin'"

The only people left around the fire are Steve-O and a dozen Samburu warriors who don't speak a word of English. Armed with spears, they're supposed to be posted around camp to chase off lions and hyenas. Instead, Steve-O has them chugging wine-in-a-box.

"Are you guys ready to bounce?" he shouts before putting on some old-school Michael Jackson. The warriors begin doing tribal dances to "Wanna Be Startin' Somethin'." They continue for hours, shaking, high-fiving and yelling out to the music. The only interruption is Steve-O's voice, piercing across the African plains: "You guys want to hear some Iron Maiden?" FHM

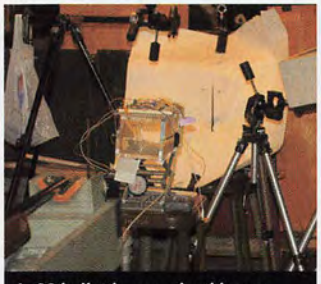
HIGH SPEED SLOWDOWN!

While other scientists fiddle with the ozone and DNA, MIT grad students use their evil genius to snap photos of high-speed impacts and contained explosions

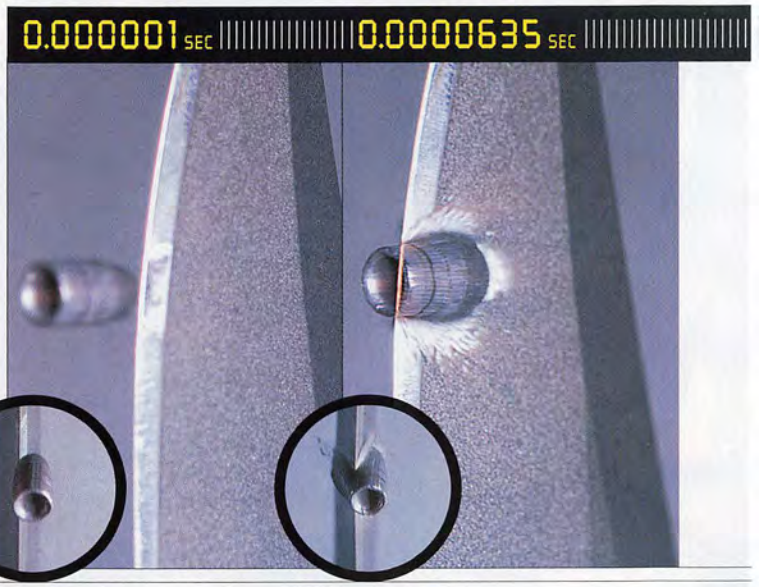
BY JON CHASE • PHOTOGRAPHY BY JOSH WEAVER AND JEFF LIEBERMAN

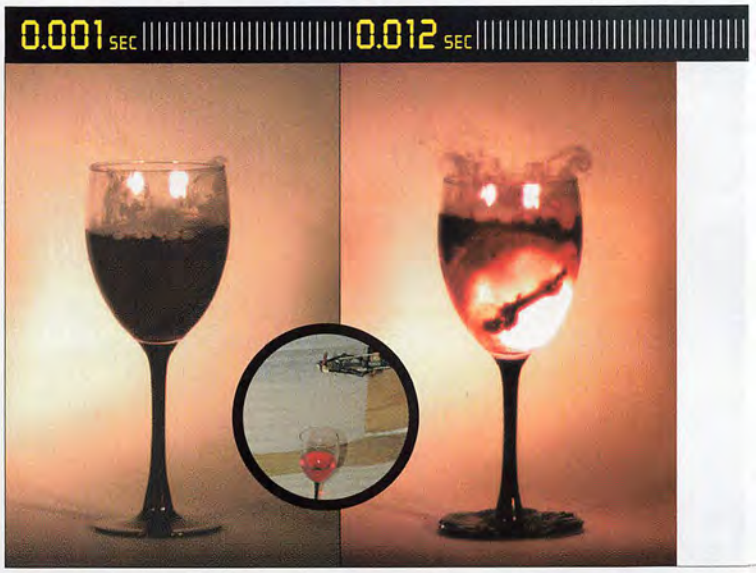


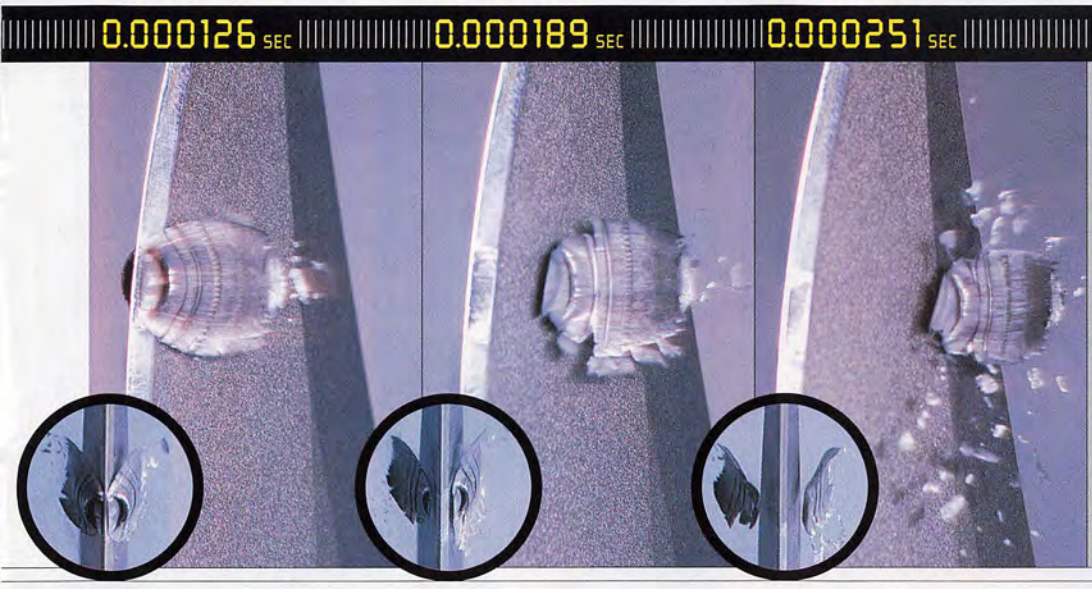
A .22 bullet learns a hard lesson

It's simply unfair that of all the great tech toys in the world, the best ones are locked away in labs by uptight, safety-minded scientists. So FHM hired MIT's Josh Weaver and Jeff Lieberman to put their technical wizardry and secret stash of high-speed cameras to good use. Here are the slow-mo results after they shot, popped, punched and blew shit up. See the video online at FHMUS.com

The MIT crew sics a Black Cat firecracker on an unsuspecting wine glass

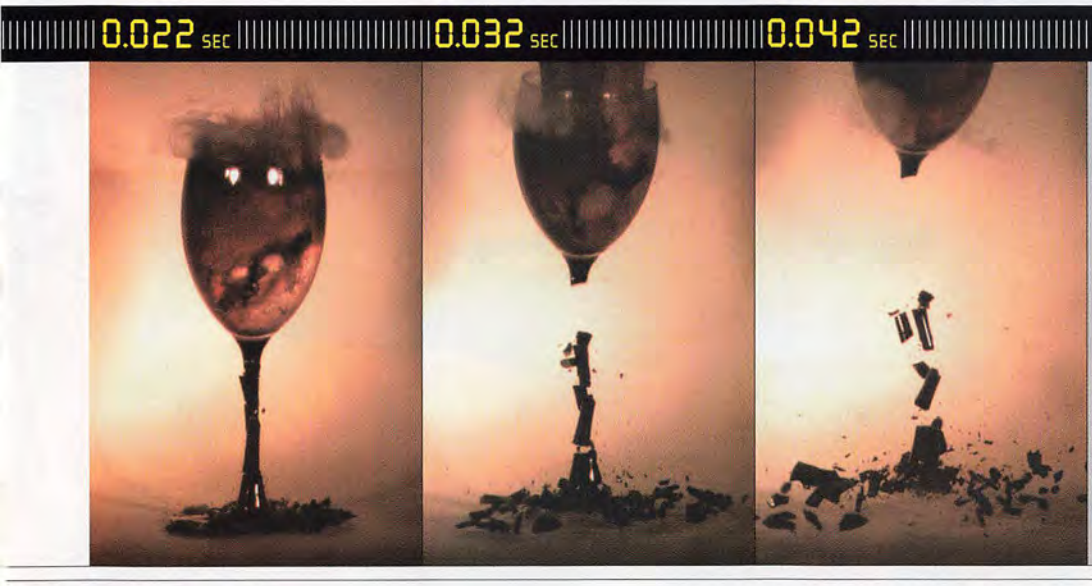






Knife wins gunfight
A lead bullet moving at 1,200 feet per second is split in two after hitting a SOG Navy SEAL knife. Since a typical camera's flash is too slow to catch a bullet on film, Lieberman designed a laser system that triggers a micro-strobe, which is 1,000 times faster—1/1,000,000 of a second. "We still didn't know where the bullet would go after it hit the knife," Lieberman says. "So we did test shots with inch-thick plywood set around it. If we didn't hear bullet fragments bouncing off the lab's walls and no one got shot, that was a pretty good sign."

Cork mimics sex act
"A test cork shot off accidentally," Weaver says. "We clocked it at 45 mph—good thing it didn't hit a light." Amazingly, the cork expanded to nearly twice its diameter in 1/100 of a second. Predictably, the wood fled and the gush ended soon after.



Firecracker goes ballistic
"We weren't sure if the firecracker would explode the glass or go off in our hand," Weaver says. So they built a mechanical pincher to hold the firecracker at a distance and used a long stick to light it. To capture the explosion, they used a special $80,000 Photron video camera and snapped images in 1/8,000 of a second. "It was like an upside-down rocket engine," Lieberman says. "The water acted like fuel and pushed the glass down until it exploded and shot into the air. It moved almost a foot in 1/50 of a second."

Punch stirs gut tsunami
"Waves travel faster in solids than in air," Lieberman says. "The fat rolls are moving close to the speed of sound." To record the flesh-on-flesh impact, they used a scorching 5,000 watts of light. "The guy's skin would start to burn in just a few seconds." FHM

The Apprentices

When creating his hit NBC reality show, Donald Trump made his best business move yet: not hiring any ugly people

At the World Bar in New York City's Trump World Tower, a Thursday evening never passes without a group offering a toast to NBC's mammoth reality-show hit The Apprentice. That's because the bar hosts weekly viewing parties that feature a drink called the You're Fired! (two ounces of bourbon, one ounce of Cointreau, a splash of lemon juice and a drop of grenadine). One Tuesday morning, however, the bar saw an even better reason to raise a stiff one: FHM collected contestants Katrina Campins, Kristi Frank, Amy Henry and Ereka Vetrini. In their underwear.

"Ereka, you're so hot," Amy teases. Meanwhile, Katrina notices her bra doesn't quite fit. "I'm poppin' out here," she says. And Kristi attempts to both balance on a couch cushion and still look seductive. Finally, as flashbulbs go off, Ereka wonders aloud, "Do I look totally retarded now?" She is quickly assured that she does not.

"These women were hired because of their great intelligence," says The Donald, who will pick his ultimate protégé on April 15's final episode. "But they also turned out to be beautiful, and that's not so bad." No, not bad at all.

He wanted me to get in scuba gear and dive into the ocean to tell him how deep it was."

"Before my confrontation with Omarosa, I heard she had pushed a cameraman. That's another reason I was furious with her—I was very close with production. If you're sick of the cameras, don't sign up for a reality television show. People were accusing me of being violent with her? That's because they didn't see her push the cameraman two seconds earlier."

GUNS AND POPCORN

A group of former gangsters have found the one place where a criminal record can give you a career: Hollywood

BY PIERS HERNU ◆ PHOTOGRAPHY BY ESTEVAN ORIOL

"I watched my dad stab my mom when I was a little kid," recalls Manuel "Manny" Jimenez, who was raised in East Los Angeles, the center of America's Latino gang culture. "I've been shot, I've been stabbed, I've had my head broken, I've had my house shot up."

With a history like Jimenez's there's only one thing to do: Try making a buck from it in Hollywood. "I was a big fan of Reservoir Dogs, and one night I saw Quentin Tarantino on The Tonight Show," Jimenez recalls. "He said anyone could come to Hollywood even if they've been to jail. I was like, 'Oh shit, there it is.'"

Seven years later, Jimenez is the CEO of Suspect Entertainment, a company comprised primarily of former Latino gang members. The group provides one-stop shopping for all of Hollywood's Latino gangster needs. They offer script consultations, graffiti artists, lowrider rentals and plenty of actors who come pre-equipped with gangster-standard goatees, shaved heads and tattoos. They have added their faces and expertise to movies like Training Day and S.W.A.T. This summer they will produce their own independent film, and they've created a weekly TV series that's being shopped around Hollywood. They are dedicated to bringing realistic portrayals of Latino thug life to the screen.

"I can go to school to learn screenwriting, producing, directing, all that," Jimenez says. "But they can never go learn what it's like to see your parents OD on drugs, watch your kids get shot or see your homeboy die with his eye hanging out of the socket. The things we experienced—betrayal, drugs, money—they can never, ever learn that. It just ain't going to happen."

The headquarters for Suspect Entertainment sits in a small green building in a lower-class West Los Angeles neighborhood. Iron grills and razor wire protect many of the surrounding structures, and the smaller side streets are crammed with houses, some of which have stalks of corn growing in flower beds and chickens running across the lawn.

"To us, it's not really that rough a neighborhood, but to outside people, I guess it's kind of scary," Jesse Acosta tells FHM as he meets us by our car. And then to reassure: "There haven't been any drive-bys since we've been here." Comforting.

Acosta is the director of production and development at Suspect. He heads into the building, and then through to the backyard where a group of men chill by a lowrider. For anyone who's recently seen a movie, TV show or commercial that featured a Latino gangster, chances are several of these gentlemen will look familiar. (Although since FHM's visit two men, Daniel Venegas and Noel Guglielmi, have left the company.)

Suspect Entertainment is primarily Jimenez's vision. "I'd pretty much done all I could do in gang life," Jimenez recalls. "The next step was life in prison or death."

In 1997, Jimenez was picked up for a robbery he hadn't committed because a witness identified him in a photo lineup. "I knew I didn't do it, but in the gang you don't rat," Jimenez says. "You take what comes." What came was a trial. With his girlfriend—who was pregnant with his third child—watching, Jimenez sat at the defendant's table. The witness took the stand, looked him in the eye and said, "Oh, I made a mistake. That's not the guy."

"That was a sign," Jimenez says. Ready to change his life, he drove around Hollywood until he found a film crew. He then approached people on set, politely asking for advice on breaking into the movie business. Work as an extra seemed to be the easiest way in. "My first job was as an extra in Deep Impact," Jimenez says. "I was like, 'That's it. I'm in Hollywood. They've fucked up now.'"

Acosta leans against a wall, trying to duck some of the noonday sun. Of all the group, he is the only one who actually has hair. "Two of my brothers were in gangs," Acosta explains. "I stayed away from it, though, because I saw what they put my mother through." Not that that stopped him from trying to play a gangster on film. "Casting agencies think, 'Oh, you're Mexican, you can play a gangster. Just throw some clothes on,'" Acosta says. "I was a guy with spiky hair portraying a gangster in The Fast and the Furious. Manny was also there and he was saying, 'These aren't real gangsters.' Then he brought in real homeboys. I was like, 'Hey, these guys are taking my job.'"

By that time, Jimenez had established a reputation for helping casting agencies find other thuggish Latino extras. "I became a little networking group," he says. "I was making their job easy. I was like, 'Shit, I'll bring my whole family.'"

What Jimenez didn't have was business experience. Acosta, however, did. The two teamed up, and Suspect was born. The company quickly booked their actors gigs in music videos and commercials. The primary commodity they bring to the table is authenticity. Films such as Training Day, for example, will hire Suspect to ensure they accurately portray Latino gangs. "People in Alabama want to know what's real,"

CHARLIE'S ANGELS: FULL THROTTLE

FHM gets our own tattoo . . .

. . . thankfully it will wear off

Acosta says. "When they saw Training Day, they liked it because it looked real. There are times when a director asks, 'Can you act like you're in prison?' Some of our guys have been to prison—there's no acting."

Of course, there are plenty of filmmakers a bit wary about having a bunch of gangsters so close to their multimillion-dollar talent. "If you get gangsters from the street, you're going to get fools who are stealing from you, drinking and smoking weed on the set," Jimenez says. "They're going to be telling you, 'Oh, this shit's all wrong, motherfucker.' But we understand there's a certain way to approach someone's acting or writing. This is their craft and you don't want to make them feel bad."

But even well-behaved gangsters can run into some on-set difficulties. Minor inconveniences include misunderstandings with suspicious crew members—like the time security surrounded a few of the guys when they hit the craft services table on S.W.A.T. But it can get far more dangerous. "We've been in neighborhoods where rival gang members have driven up, seen our actors and started throwing up gang signs or brandishing weapons," Acosta says. "I try to explain to the people, 'These guys are actors. They're not disrespecting your neighborhood.' Those situations are hard for the actor because he can no longer focus 100 percent on his performance. He's also worried about when to duck."

The photographer arrives and leads the group to a side alley, where he snaps shots of individual group members. "Our gang affiliation never really ends; we just stop being active," explains Frank Alvarez, a thick, intimidating guy with a hoarse voice.

The members of Suspect hail from different gangs, but they've all put aside any old grudges. "We're not out there looking for guys we hate," Alvarez says. "Although that doesn't mean guys aren't out there looking for us."

Cesar Garcia, a thinner gentleman with a more trimmed mustache, joins the conversation. "A gang member's mentality is, if you see a guy who looks like another gang member, you hit him up," he explains. "You want to know what gang he belongs to so you can tell if he's the one who shot your homeboy last week."

"The guys at Suspect are like an extended family for me, but I never take them to my neighborhood to hang out and drink a beer," Alvarez says. "Our neighborhoods don't get along. If I'd seen somebody bring someone else into my neighborhood when I was younger, I wouldn't have cared if the two were friends. We'd have beat up both of them."

For the Suspects, the attention that comes with having your face broadcast on national television comes with its own set of problems. "I was at the mall, and there were four bald-headed Hispanic gang-member guys who kept following me," Garcia recalls. "I started to worry, and then one approached me. I expected him to start something, but instead he goes, 'Hey, are you the guy from that commercial?' It's funny. You look at people now and wonder, 'Do they want to jump me or do they want my autograph?'"

'GANG MEMBERS HAVE SEEN OUR ACTORS ON SET AND STARTED BRANDISHING WEAPONS'

Everyone gathers in an alley for a final group picture. They then decide that, before FHM joins the shot, we need our own tattoo. They carefully trace "FHM" across our beer gut with a black Sharpie. As initiation ceremonies go, it must be the most gentle one that L.A. has ever witnessed. Yet FHM is standing with a group many hardened gangsters would love to join. "This isn't a group home. We're not counselors. We're not going to get you off drugs or into AA," Garcia says. "But if you're ready, then, yeah, we'll show you how to do what we're doing."

"It doesn't matter if you're a gangbanger or an ex-prostitute," Jimenez adds. "You can succeed in Hollywood." FHM

Without a Trace's Poppy Montgomery demonstrates her undercover techniques

From Heather Locklear on T.J. Hooker to the myriad actresses with rock-hard bottoms on NYPD Blue, female TV cops always seem to be packing serious heat. But when it comes to portraying FBI agents on the small screen, it's been a parade of Gillian Anderson's sensible haircuts and pants suits. Well, Poppy Montgomery from the CBS hit drama Without a Trace is on a one-woman crusade to shoot down the myth that female FBI agents look like J. Edgar Hoover in drag. "Female FBI agents aren't like male women," Poppy says. "They're attractive women who take care of their appearance and keep up with the guys."

PHOTOGRAPHY BY PERRY HAGOPIAN

Like any good federal agent, Poppy strong-armed Hollywood into giving her what she wanted. With only a McDonald's Extra Value Meal to her name at age 18, she bombarded Julia Roberts's manager with a phone call and head shot daily until he signed her. "It was either a restraining order or representation, and I got representation," quips the Sydney, Australia, native.

Now the only thing the 31-year-old starlet has to worry about is her ever-increasing frosting addiction. "If I'm not careful, I will get a big ass," she admits. After our thorough interrogation, a large derriere should be the least of her concerns.

Do you ever try to get out of tickets by telling a cop, "I play an FBI agent on TV"?

I've tried flirting with cops to get out of speeding tickets, but it doesn't work. There was one time when I did get out of a ticket, and then the next time I got one, it didn't matter that I was batting my eyelashes and everything. I was mad. I was like, "How does that happen?" because the first time I'd gotten out of the ticket, so I expected every time that I cutely said, "Please, officer, don't give me a ticket," it would work.

Is it true you were too scared to shoot a real gun while doing research for Without a Trace?

I wasn't frightened with shooting the gun. I was fine with that. I was frightened by its power. You really have a dangerous weapon in your hand. Knowing you could kill someone is a scary thing.

But there has to be some sort of rush when you shoot that first bullet.

I wasn't like, "I love the smell of napalm in the morning." I was really humbled by it because guns aren't just these cool things you see on TV. They're weapons that kill people.

Is it the danger element that gets guys all horny for chicks who can handle artillery?

I imagine that's sexy to a man, so I get it. There is that fantasy of chicks with guns. It is a hot thing for guys.

Speaking of hot, what do you wear to feel sexy?

I'm not into crotchless lingerie. I like light, effortless simple kinds of stuff. Boxer shorts, the wife-beater tank tops. I like those a lot, or even briefs

Back home, everyone sunbathes nude. You can be topless and a tank top in the summer. Places make me feel sexy more than clothes. New York is a very sexy city.

Tell us about your wild side.

My wildness is more like jumping on a plane to go to Florida by myself when I was 18, or running off to Bali with my boyfriend when I was 16. I don't have wild stories where I'm like, "I was dancing on the bar and my skirt flew up." That's not really me. I'm more impulsive and spontaneous about stuff, and I'm not afraid of a lot, so it can lead to people going, "Wow, that was a wild decision you made," and I don't think of it that way.

What's something else that's risque about you?

I have a pool at my house and I skinny-dip. I don't have issues with nudity. I don't mind walking around naked. I was brought up on the beach in Australia. There, everybody sunbathes nude. You can be topless.

COORS® ORIGINAL SUPER BOWL XXXVIII PARTY

FHM and Coors® Original teamed up with Houston Texans Linebacker Jamie Sharper to host an NFL Players Party, kicking off Super Bowl weekend at Houston's new hot spot, Red Star Night Club.

Along with Green Bay Packers Safety Darren Sharper, the two brothers hosted over 500 fellow athlete and celebrity guests. Among the attendees that packed the club's three floors and mingled with FHM girls were: Philadelphia Eagles Quarterback Donovan McNabb, Pittsburgh Steelers Running Back Jerome Bettis, and New York Giants Wide Receiver Amani Toomer and Long Snapper Carson Dach.

People aren't really hung up over it, and yet when I had a scene where I had to be in bed with Tori Spelling in a film, I was terrified by it. I was like, "Oh my God, I really hope that my boob isn't falling under my arm right now while I'm lying on my back." That would really suck. That's a vanity thing though. I'm comfortable with nudity.

In that film, 50 Ways to Lose Your Lover, were you upset that you couldn't make love with Tori since, as you put it, Tori "has the rockingest body" you've ever seen?

I was so nervous. I was like a little schoolgirl, but Tori, oh she has an incredible body. I was like, "Damn, I would kill for her body."

I can have a sailor's mouth. I don't shy away from that stuff

We've also heard that your mouth needs to be washed out with soap.

I can have a sailor's mouth. I can keep up with the boys when they're talking like truck drivers. I certainly don't shy away from that stuff. I think it's funny and interesting when someone at a dinner party tells a completely inappropriate joke. I'm the one who's rolling on the floor laughing my ass off.

Has it ever gotten you in trouble?

God, whose mouth hasn't? I certainly don't walk into a meeting yelling, "Motherfucker!" I normally reserve that for my dear friends and family.

And what does your mom say?

She just thinks the word "fuck" is not the most interesting word. When I'm like, "Oh fuck," she tells me, "Can't you think of anything more interesting to say? That's not very clever." She would never get mad, but she would just be like, "Honey, go get the thesaurus and look up something else. Expand your brain." But I like the word "fuck." FHM

ALL-STAR SHOWDOWN!

Florida Marlins phenom Dontrelle Willis battles Team FHM in a pentathlon of arcade sports

It's not often that FHM gets a chance to flex our considerable muscles in the competitive world of pretend sports. So when Dontrelle Willis of the World Champion Florida Marlins threw down the gauntlet—in his case, an oversized leather baseball glove—we were happy to oblige. The fireballing 22-year-old National League Rookie of the Year met FHM's All-Stars on a mutually agreed upon field of battle—the arcade in New York City's ESPNZone. It would be a best-of-five tournament, with no mercy asked for or given.

EVENT 01 SUPER CHEXX HOCKEY

Willis approaches the vintage hockey game and blurts, "Oh man, I'm no good at hockey—I can barely ice skate!" Editor-in-chief Scott Gramling swiftly organizes his offense and gets an easy goal off the drop. The game becomes a wipeout, and so they play another, and then another. Willis is getting trounced. "This is how I feel when I play the Cubs," he says. "I pitched against them once and threw the ball well, but since then, they absolutely hammer me. I played for them in the minors, and now they're the one team that hands me my ass every time." Willis finally gives up, and walks away muttering, "I guess he's just got more experience pulling knobs."

EVENT 02 TROPHY HUNTING

FHM breaks out our ace—a gun-loving Canadian! Reporter Grace Carter cocks her burner and drops smack about hand-eye coordination. Willis is unfazed. "I was 5-foot-4 going into high school, but grew a foot," he recalls. "To keep coordinated, I'd dribble a basketball around the block. And I was a Boys Club Ping-Pong champ." Sure enough, Willis's pinpoint accuracy nets him the win. Canada disappoints again.

EVENT 03 FINAL FURLONG

Assistant editor Phillip Crandall mounts his nag expertly. Willis, meanwhile, is uneasy. "Man, I'm from Oakland. The only time I've ever seen a horse was in a parade." And they're off! Except Willis, who is dazzled by Crandall's bobbing 'fro as he humps madly away. "Two years ago I grew a baby Afro," Willis says appreciatively. "I'm a late bloomer, but if I had the facial hair, I'd rock the Rollie Fingers—twirl it up and everything. Just wait 10 years." FHM's diversion pays off, with Willis losing by three lengths, and 10 inches of sideburn.

EVENT 04 SUNDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL COUNTDOWN

"I can't believe this," Willis grunts. "I gotta elevate my game." Pulling out a pen, he writes Joyce, his mom's name, on the brim of his cap, per his ritual. "When I was a kid, she was a welder," Willis says. "Sometimes I'd have to drive her places because she'd have flash-burned eyes. I'm doing this for her." Associate editor Sam Barclay steps forward and betrays his Australian roots with a Lamar Latrell–esque limp-wristed throwing style. Willis hits receivers with ease en route to a convincing victory.

EVENT 05 SUPER SHOT

It's a classic: tied up for the final game. Senior editor Jon Chase is near tears. Willis is ice cold. "I was the first to come out of the bullpen for Game One at Yankee Stadium," he recalls. "Running to the mound, all I could think was, 'God, please don't let me trip and fall on my face.' Once I got throwing, though, it all felt natural. I don't have much jewelry but I can't wait to wear my ring." Like the Series, youth triumphs again, 53-22. Willis shakes hands graciously. But he still owes us quarters. FHM

SH LANDING

At this year's Winter X Games, motocross star Brian Deegan tried a 360 jump never performed before. All he got to show for it was two broken wrists, a busted femur and a check for $250

BY BRIAN DEEGAN AS TOLD TO MICHAEL DOLAN
PHOTOGRAPHY BY BO BRIDGES

The Approach

I never planned on doing a 360 jump off the 90-foot ramps at Winter X until I got there. I hit a 360 jump off the 45-foot ramp in Summer X, so I practiced the 75-foot jump in my foam pit at home about a hundred times for the Winter Games. But the 45- and 75-foot ramps were way too kicked up in Aspen. When ramps are that kicked up, you're not getting enough forward drive to make the landing. You'll fall short of the tranny—the downward landing ramp—and land on the flat part, which is a nightmare. When I saw how the ramps were flipped, I probably should have backflipped, but I had practiced the 360. The pressure was on and everyone wanted to see me do it, so I went for it on the 90-footer.

The Jump

The guy says, "Go," and I just pin it and start shifting gears. I had to do the jump in third gear to make it, and I've never done a 360 in third gear before. That throws you off enough, then on top of that, you're not sure if you're going to reach the landing after you do your trick. I was hoping the bike would make the rotation. But I had too much forward

"I dropped four stories to the ice"

"I'm going to ride with the pipe in, but when they take it out, I'll be out for another two months"

"You never get away from the pain"

"They took a pin out with a scalpel"

"I'll have this pipe in my femur for about nine months"

The Aftermath

momentum going up that ramp. I went up the lip, looked left and twisted as hard as I could. It felt like an eternity. I'm like three or four stories up in the air and I've already spotted the landing. But my front wheel is shooting straight up in the air. The wheels aren't dipping down, which means the bike's not rotating. I'm looking at the landing and I say to myself, "I either let go of the bike, get my hands and feet in front of me and maybe break my arms and legs, or I can hang onto the bike and let it land on me—back first—and I'll probably never walk again." I just spun and threw the bike. Usually, you never let go of the bike so that the worst-case scenario is you land on your bike's suspension and it cushions your fall a little bit. Well, with these new aerial tricks, it's a whole different ballgame. And I dropped without my bike like four stories onto the ice. It felt like cement.

Instantly, I felt my wrists pop and I felt my hip pop. My wife came running up to me and I told her, "I broke my wrists and my femur." I didn't need a doctor to tell me. It was pain that you can't even believe. You try to get away from it, to move this way or that way, and it just doesn't go away. Promoters will never understand that feeling of putting yourself on the line and risking your neck for a sport you're into. It'll never be appreciated the right way until actual athletes start running our sport. So the promoters are home in their cushy beds while I'm deciding whether to get two pints of blood and trying to walk with a walker. And trying to get a shower. Having my wife wash my balls and wipe my ass for me. And you know what I got sent home with? A $250 check for a last-place finish. My medical bills are ridiculous. It'll probably cost $50,000 to come back from this and my insurance won't cover a lot of it. I'm also going to lose about $40,000 in appearance fees from not being able to ride for the next few months. By the time your readers read this, I'll probably be riding again. I'll have to go to Summer X with a pipe in my hip, so I can't 360, or else I'm risking the chance of landing on that hip with metal in it. They said if I break that hip with the metal in it, I might never walk again. They may never be able to fix my leg. People aren't going to understand why I can't do certain things: "Brian's back. Well, he didn't have that good a performance." I'll have to go home, eat my shitty performance and fucking go have this plate taken out, and then sit at home for two more months. That's what I got for the jump. FHM

PAMELA ANDERSON

Pam

BY DAVID A. KEEPS

She's done with television and through with the movies. So what does a legend do with the rest of her life?

CELEBRITY PICTURES LA

When Pamela Anderson buzzed us in to her Malibu hideaway, we pulled her antique French doors instead of pushing and almost ripped them off the hinges. Pam has a way of making a guy want to break doors down for her. But when we finally saw her, we were in for a jaw-dropping surprise. "I've retired from TV and film," she says. "It takes too much time away from my kids. The last thing I ever want to do is a TV series again—that's too much work."

Do the math: Over the past 14 years, the little girl from Vancouver Island, Canada, has blown up into the world's most famous sex symbol, gracing hundreds of magazine covers and millions of erotic fantasies. She's also created two television shows, redefined "home movies," partied with millionaire moguls and rock-'n'-roll rowdies, gotten married, then divorced, and may be the No. 1 mom on the planet.

But from now on, you'll have to satiate your Pam cravings on her Web site, www.pamelaanderson.com. "It's very personal," she promises. "I work on it a lot. Subscription money goes to my foundation benefiting charities, so it's better than spending your money on all those boring jerk-off sites." She also has a magazine column and a book deal and a cruelty-free fashion line that debuts this fall. "I promised Jay Leno I would do a fashion show on a trampoline," she swears.

Pam may be blond, but dumb she ain't. She knows what we want. "I know what the hell's going on. I hate to admit it, because pretending that I'm stupid has always been my ace in the hole. I hate being censored too. When someone tells me not to say something, then that will be the only thing circling my brain."

I love music during sex. Lights off, broad daylight, whatever

Is Pamela Anderson an international sex goddess or is she the girl-next-door Donald Trump?
Where'd you get that? I'm just a ho!
Ho? Ha! As a graduate of the Hasselhoff Academy of Business, you created V.I.P. and Stripperella. Have you always wanted to be a cartoon?
Let the animated character carry the torch. Let her be on T-shirts forever and people will go, "Remember Pamela Anderson? Wonder if she still looks like that!" Then I can get old and wrinkly and lose my teeth and eat cookies all day.
Do you ever look at pictures of yourself and say, "I look hot!"?
I look at these pictures and I laugh because it's like, who the hell do I think I am? All the poses that I love doing are like playing a character. It's fun, and it is a part of me. I know I'm an exhibitionist somewhere deep down. Obviously. It's also a personal test for me because I was very shy growing up. I wouldn't even change in front of my mother.
Weren't you an athlete?
I was 5-foot-2 when I graduated high school. I was tiny but very athletic and that was my whole world. I think sports really save people's lives. It keeps you out of trouble. I was a volleyball player and a gymnast, which has come in handy—the gymnast part. And every once in a while I still get a ball or two slammed to the head, yeah!
Has being a mom changed your ideas about love and romance?
I was born to be a mom. I've looked after everybody my whole life. I mean, I don't know what to do if I don't have, like, a one-eyed dog or six kids. I'm the community center of this whole neighborhood; everyone drops their kids off here.
What part of that makes you say, "That is not in my job description."
Cleaning the toilet seats for my kids. I tell them, "Listen, guys. Aim in the hole! It's a big one, you can do it!"
Do your kids know you are Pamela Anderson?
My son Brandon was at surf camp last year. When I came to pick him up, he said, "Those kids are calling you Pamela Anderson! What is that?" And I said, "I'm Mommy. Don't ever call me that!"
What will Mommy do now that she's done with acting?
I'm working on a home collection that I'm thinking of calling Topless France. It's based on me wandering around my house topless. That's

I'd rather it be good and short than long and boring

French. I'm also writing two books—summertime sexy novels—that are loosely based on my life, the roman à clef thing, so you won't know if it's truth or fiction. Usually the truth is better, but for the record, it's all fiction! And I love that I have a ghostwriter, but I tell everybody I have a ghostwriter, and you're not supposed to do that, right?

To quote Victoria's Secret, "What is sexy?"

A push-up bra? No. I like people who are going through shit. People in the trenches. People who are evolving and living authentically. What they look like is the icing on the cake, but there has to be cake. You know what happens when you're all out of cake?

Huh?

There are two things on the menu, cake and cock, and we're almost out of cake! There's a good FHM line. You can go home now.

What physical traits do you prefer in a man? Other than a big slice of cake.

What's more beautiful than the flesh is your soul, your spirit. That's what keeps people interested anyway. Having said that, I do have very good penis karma. I don't think I've ever seen a small penis. I'm a lucky girl. I can't say whose is the largest. I don't want to ruin anyone's image. It's not the obvious, I'll leave it at that.

Do we have to be a rock star to be in your show?

People ask me, "Why are you so attracted to rock stars?" and I have to say, "You meet somebody or they track you down or stalk you, you know?" And it's usually somebody like a rock star because they're confident. I love eccentrics. And musicians have a side to them that is powerful. And believe me, if they write a song for me, it's over. Forget it. Done. It's just not fair.

Have you ever set your sights on somebody and gone after them the way men have gone after you?

I'm actually really stupid. If I see someone I really like, I go to the opposite end of the room or leave. It makes me really nervous to be around someone I'm attracted to if I don't know they're interested in me.

What is the secret of seduction?

Don't beat around the bush. You can't be shy in bed. Just be upfront.

Upfront first and then . . .

Up the rear later, yeah. Kidding!

Why do you think guys are into that?

The butt? Because of Jennifer Lopez? Because it's uncharted territory? It's all good, whatever way it happens.

When it comes to sex, do you prefer power or stamina?

Power. As long as it's good, I'd rather it be good and short than long and boring. Although I've never really experienced long and boring.

Do you turn down the lights and turn up the music, or turn up the lights and turn down the music?

I love music during sex. Lights on, lights off, broad daylight, whatever. I'm open to it. You're flashing me back to the old days.

So you're single now?

I'm single. Try seeing people with two kids and a full schedule. It's nearly impossible. I have great friends. I have a lot of men around me who I adore and love and sometimes sex just gets in the way of a relationship.

What about your physical needs?

I'm an independent woman. I can take care of myself. That was one of the first things I learned. That wasn't something I still need to figure out. I know my body pretty well. But if you don't have sex, you don't really need it as much. I think once you are having a lot of sex, then you need more.

Top or bottom?

I usually get to both places, eventually. Those gymnastics do come in handy.

Is there any place you wouldn't consider making love?

In my kids' rooms, obviously. Everywhere else is fair game. I think I'm quite brave in those areas. There's not a stone unturned. FHM

THE PAPARAZZO

Celebrity photographer Russell Turiak on hunting Brando, peeing in his car and getting shot in the line of duty

How far is too far when you're going after a photo?

My philosophy is, "Show me where the line is because I want to put my toes up against it." But once you do that, the line gets moved. So you go over it. I've been up against police who told me I can't come on the property. I ask, "Where's the property line?" They'll bend the rules to protect stars.

For example?

In New Hampshire, it says "Live Free or Die" on the license plates. I was taking photos of Denzel Washington and Whitney Houston ice skating on a pond. The cop stands in front of me in an intimidating manner. He says, "You have to get out of here. You're a professional." He puts his hand on his stick, real threatening. So I ask, "What happened to 'live free or die'?" He says, "You're a real wiseass, aren't you?" He starts to believe he's working for the movie company. I was obeying the law. I got some nice stuff as soon as he turned his back.

Have you ever been attacked?

I was in a helicopter trying to photograph Don Johnson and Melanie Griffith's wedding when I was shot at. I got hit with shotgun pellets next to my eye, in my arm and my leg, and they thought it was a big, funny joke. A helicopter is a very delicate craft. That thing's got a tank with 100 gallons of jet fuel. If one of the hydraulic lines had been punctured, we could've crashed into the house and exploded.

Was it worth taking a bullet for?

No. I didn't get pictures of the wedding. The security claimed they were skeet shooting. They were off-duty Aspen police, so nobody would investigate it. I wrote a letter to the governor. I have a photo of a guy on horseback with a shotgun. There's a federal law that states you can't point a firearm at a moving airborne craft. Even the FBI wouldn't mess with it.

How much cash do you dole out for an operation like photographing the Don Johnson wedding?

Helicopters are about $350 to $450 an hour. We had a jet plane standing by to have the film flown to Denver. I had to pay the jet pilot $800 to kill a couple of hours—he was just sitting around waiting for the film. If I'd have gotten the film, he would've received $2,200 for flying it to the office. We had the helicopter for the afternoon, so it was a few thousand dollars for that bill.

A new celebrity will kiss your ass in Macy's window on Christmas Eve to get attention

Any other narrow escapes?

When Sean Penn and Madonna were shooting Shanghai Surprise in Hong Kong, I paid someone $50 to let me shoot from their window. Somebody spotted us and they had bodyguards waiting outside the building for me. When the kids who lived there came home, they told me that Madonna had told them to go fuck themselves when they asked for her autograph that morning. They were more than glad to help me go up to the roof and leave through another building.

What's the most money you ever made from a photo?

It was on a series of John McEnroe, Tatum O'Neal and their new baby, at the height of his career. I don't like to give numbers, but it made the down payment on my house.

How do you hide?

I hide in plain sight. Dress and act a certain way. Don't get startled and point, just go right by a celebrity like you didn't see them.

What's the longest you ever had to wait for a photo?

For two weeks, I spent every spare hour I had, other than the four hours a night I'd sleep, waiting around a hotel for Marlon Brando to show up. Finally, I got a couple of pictures. He offered me $50 to go away. I told him, "I'm sorry if what I do offends you. I deeply admire your work, but this is what I do." He said, "Go ahead and take the pictures."

What's the key to staking someone out for a long time?

Bring your cell phone and something to eat. If you have a cup of coffee, save the cup. That's one less time you have to get out of the car.

How do you deal with other photographers who are assholes?

If you're around other photographers, you're in the wrong place. Half the time the rude things these photographers say chase celebrities away. If I want a celeb to give me the finger or stick their tongue out, I'll ask them. You'll be surprised who will do it. I've shot hundreds of famous people with their tongues out: Mick Jagger, Cher. I have a great photo of Elizabeth Taylor giving me the finger.

What do you say to celebrities who criticize what you do?

When a new celebrity starts out, they'll kiss your ass in Macy's window on Christmas Eve to get attention. Then once they get attention, they want to be selective about it.

Has a celebrity ever paid you to take their picture?

No, but when Michael Jackson first had problems with pedophilia accusations a few years back, his "bumblicist" put out calls to photographers telling them he would be in a certain ice-cream parlor at a certain time with a blond woman.

Gwyneth Paltrow hired someone to take the first public picture of her pregnant. Does that tight control make your job harder?

When people take their own wedding photos and choose to market them like Michael Douglas and Catherine Zeta-Jones did, they're taking my business away from me. On the other hand, they're selling their own pictures. How can they complain that I'm going to do it?

By selling the photos, is it still a privacy issue?

No. Here's another example: Ben Affleck was on the street and there are about seven of us taking pictures. A woman walks by with her boyfriend and says, "Why do you have to bother him?" I say, "Lady, do you see what you're accusing me of? That's what you're doing to me right now." These photos appear in newspapers and magazines worldwide. If a million people enjoy them for one second, that's a million seconds. Multiply that by 30 years of doing this—that's a lot of entertainment. I'm the man they hate to love. FHM

MY DAD WAS COOL!

With his '70s 'stache and stogie, Gabe Porcaro's dad, Peter, (far right) was clearly the lord of the tarantella. Wearing a bold striped shirt, a wide tie and a tan suit with lapels broader than the hood of a 'Cuda, Peter defined groovy. This summer, Paul Smith keeps the stripes, the tie and the lapels, but freshens up the look by redoing it in graphic navy and white. Yes, Gabe's dad was cool.

FHM and Ben Sherman team up to help a damsel in distress

Meet Lenny, a self-admitted slob, and his girlfriend Jess. "I don't want him to wear a suit, but I wish he'd look more together," Jess explains. "That orange and neon-yellow T-shirt has got to go, and those jeans are way too baggy for him. Hello, they're bleached!" Teaming up with Ben Sherman, FHM sharpened Lenny's look by putting him in a mod-inspired graphic T-shirt and a slightly fitted track top over dark jeans and suede sneakers. Lenny comments, "I've always worn baggy stuff, but I think I look cooler now and I'm just as comfortable."

ADVICE

Pamela Anderson

FHM's cover-girl grooming tips

What do you like a man to smell like?
I love patchouli. I love Old Spice. Anything that's not too perfumey. Just a hint of something. Clean is good.
What about the musk of body odor?
Not a big fan of that. Take a shower. It's not a turn-off; it's just not high on the list of desirable qualities.
What is the oddest thing you've ever found in a guy's medicine cabinet?
I haven't been to too many guys' houses. They're usually here at my house or I'm living with them. But I think if I saw anything with a "vir" at the end, like herpes medicine, I might want to whip out the condoms.

Hot Spot

the inside story on Great Sex!

by Jamie Ireland

Learning "The Ropes"...

This month I got a letter from a reader in Texas about a "little secret" that has made her sex life with her husband absolutely explosive. (Those Texans know their stuff, let me tell you.)

Tina writes:

Dear Jamie,

Last month my husband returned from a business trip in Europe, and he was hotter and hornier than ever before, with more passion than he has had for years. It was incredible. He flat wore me out! And the best part of all—he was having multiple orgasms. I know what you're thinking... men don't have multiples, but trust me he was, and his newfound pow! pow! power! stimulated me into the most intense orgasms I've ever had. So, before we knew it, we were both basking in the glow of the best sex of our lives!

We tried tantric stuff in the past, and the results were so-so. But this was something new and exciting, completely out of the ordinary. I asked my husband what had created such a dramatic change in our lovemaking and he told me he'd finally learned "the ropes."

On the last night of his business trip my husband spent an evening dining out with a Swedish nutritionist and his wife of 20 years. The couple was obviously still quite enamored with each other, so my husband asked their secret. The nutritionist told him their sex life was more passionate than ever. Then he pulled a small bottle from his satchel and gave it to my husband. The bottle contained a natural supplement that the nutritionist told my husband would teach him "the ropes" of good sex.

My husband takes the supplement every day. The supply from the nutritionist is about to run out and we desperately want to know how we can find more. Do you know anything about "the ropes," and can you tell us how we can find it in the States?

Sincerely,
Tina C., Ft. Worth, Texas

Tina, you and the rest of our readers are in luck, because it just so happens I do know about "the ropes" and the supplement your husband's Swedish friend likely shared.

The physical contractions and fluid release during male orgasm can be multiplied and intensified by a product called Ogöplex Pure Extract™. It's a daily supplement specially formulated to trigger better orgasmic experiences in men. The best part, from a woman's perspective, is that the motion and experience a man can achieve with Ogöplex Pure Extract can help stimulate our own orgasms, bringing a whole new meaning to the term simultaneous climax!

The term used by the Swedish nutritionist is actually fairly common slang for the effect your husband experienced. The enhanced contractions and heightened orgasmic release are often referred to as ropes because of the rope-like effect of release during climax. In other words, as some people have said, "it just keeps coming and coming and coming."

As far as finding it in the States, I know of just one importer—Böland Naturals. If you are interested, you can contact them at 1-866-ogoplex or ogoplex.com. Ogöplex is all-natural and safe to take. All the people I've spoken with have said taking the once-daily tablet has led to the roping effect Tina described in her letter.

Aren't you glad you asked?

MARVEL AT THE MOTORIZED WORLD

QUICK SILVER

The usually reserved automaker turns up the sexy and amps up the performance with the hell-raising ME Four-Twelve

BY MICHAEL LAFAVE

Redemption song

For a while, Céline Dion was the voice of Chrysler. But actions speak louder than (high-frequency diva) words and this scorching beauty indisputably redefines the company—so long as they decide to mass produce it. "It is as much an engineering statement as it is a design statement," says Trevor Creed, senior vice president of Chrysler design. Either way, it's a statement we hopefully won't hear screeching out of any middle-aged French Canadians.

Patriot missile

Besides its weight and Chrysler emblem, your Sebring has nothing in common with this ride. Its Mercedes-engineered six-liter, quad-turbo V-12 pumps 850 horsepower at 5,750 rpm—eight times as much as that Sebring you're hauling. As a result, it's hyped to go zero to 60 in 2.9 seconds and zero to 100 in 6.2 seconds, on its way to a top speed of 248 mph. The seven-gear transmission is shifted via Schumacher-style paddles on the steering wheel that take only 200 milliseconds to shift.

Aerodynamically challenged

Unfortunately, the ME Four-Twelve doesn't cut it in every supercar category. With its stealth-fighterlike surfaces and a computer-controlled rear spoiler that raises up to six inches, it creates 925 pounds of downforce when it nears 200 mph. Typically, this is astounding. But when you do the math, you see that it doesn't generate enough suction to even hold onto the pavement should the road flip upside-down. F1 racers can do that. We suppose we'll take one of those too.

JASON FURNARI (5)

Exterior: carbon fiber
To ensure that the ME Four-Twelve is adequately expensive once it goes into production, the body is made of carbon fiber—a strong, light and shiny material usually found in race cars and shuttles—and the underlying structure of a carbon-fiber/aluminum/chrome composite. Its massive pizza-pan-size brake disks are also crafted from this magical material, making it 65 percent lighter than iron rotors so it's both literally and figuratively a whole lot cooler. And less likely to give you lockjaw.

Interior: carbon fiber
The carbon-fiber structure of the body tub is visible throughout the roomy interior. Unlike most cars that are designed specifically for apes to drive (knees in your face, arms stretched out), there's lots of space in the ME Four-Twelve for tag-along friends. There's even an adjustable footrest so the missus can brace herself properly, whether you're showing off your lead foot on the highway or attempting to act out page 57 of the Kama Sutra at a truck stop.

TIPS

TASTE LUXURY

FHM* offers the only driving tips you'll need: how to test-drive cars you shouldn't be allowed to touch

1) "Test-driving is pretty rare," warns James Del Pozzo, sales manager at Ferrari of Beverly Hills, CA. "Nine out of 10 people order a car without even driving it." Right off the bat, you wanting to test-drive is a telltale sign you took the bus there.

FHM* says Don't despair. You've invested too many quarters into the mass-transit system—follow that investment.

2) Exotic sales people can sniff out wealth faster than Michael Jackson can smell a playground. "It's part of our business to know the good stuff," Del Pozzo says. "A guy who spends $50,000 on a Franck Muller or Rolex can probably do a quarter-million-dollar car."

FHM* says Make like Verbal Kint and get your Keyser Soze act down pat. Find out who the hell this Franck is, then find where knockoffs are hawked.

3) "We get a credit application done upfront, then the bank reviews it," Del Pozzo says. Only after it's deemed kosher will they let you ride. Yours won't be, so try offering to pay in cash—even if you're broke. "Anything over $10,000 gets reported to the feds—no ifs, ands or buts."

FHM* says Act cool with that, maintain your O.J. poker face and keep your fingers crossed.

4) Assuming you got this far, you're probably buckling in while the salesperson insists on riding shotgun. Make the most of your joy ride while you can, but remember: This ain't no Taurus. "Joe Schmo getting behind the wheel doesn't know what he's doing and could hurt himself or someone else," Del Pozzo says.

FHM* says The Jaws of Life sound so much sweeter when used in luxurious capacities.

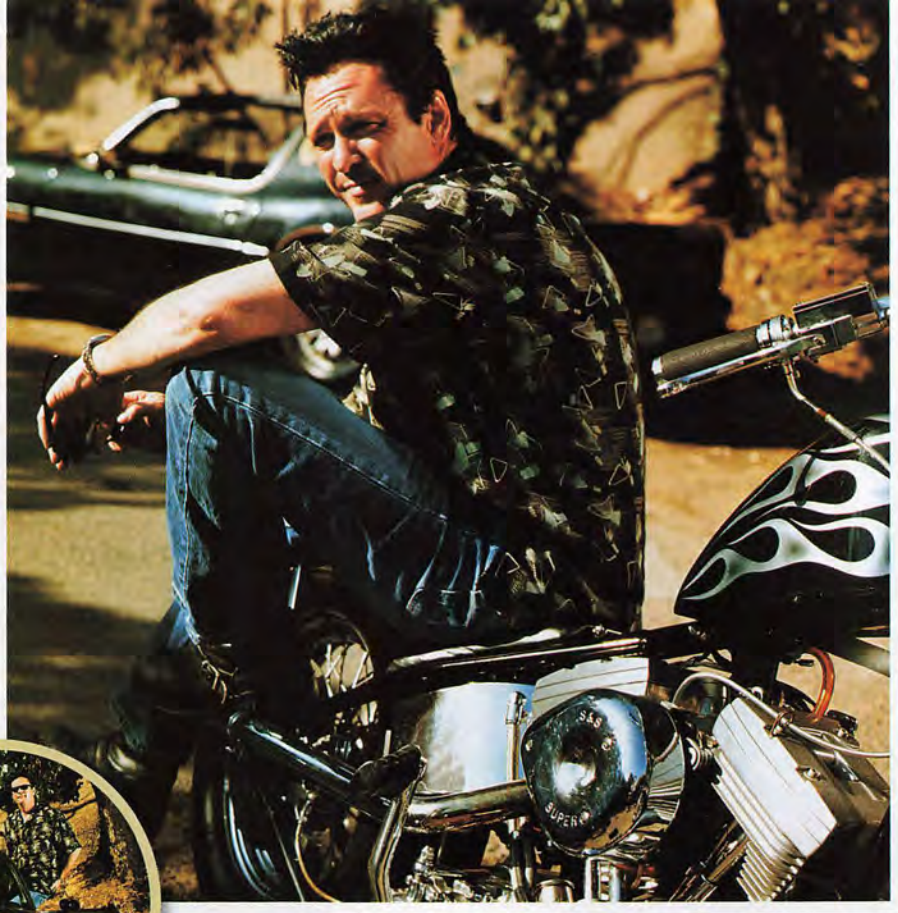
OBSESSION

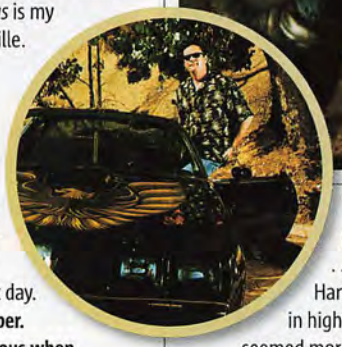
MICHAEL MADSEN

Tarantino's go-to guy on pumping gas, beating up chauffeurs and hating the bastards who freed Willy



When you landed in Hollywood, did you ever think you'd end up with a garage full of heavy-metal delights?
When I came out here, I worked at the Union 76, pumping gas, changing tires and doing oil changes. Warren Beatty was very indecisive about whether he needed oil—like he didn't trust me or something.

Have any of your cars been in your films?
The car in Reservoir Dogs is my '65 Cadillac Coupe DeVille. They didn't have a car budgeted for Mr. Blonde, so I said, "Goddamnit, just use mine." That scene when I go to the trunk and get the gasoline—that's where I parked when I got to work that day.



Quentin seems a bit hyper. Does he make you nervous when you ride shotgun?
No, he's a good driver. And a fucking genius as far as directing is concerned. He's a great friend too. I kept my '57 Chevy up at his house for a few months—he's got a little more space than I do.

What other cars do you own?
A '64 Thunderbird, a '68 Jaguar XKE and a '67 Corvette Stingray 427, which is my sons' favorite. I imagine lying in the ICU surrounded by all my sons and them whispering, "Where'd he put the Corvette? Where are the keys for the Jag?" while the heart monitor's going beep . . . beep . . . beep. I also have a Harley I built. When I was in high school, building cars seemed more interesting than studying and going to class.

In The Getaway, your character turns some laps in a stock car. Was that a stunt double or 100 percent pure Madsen?
That was all me. There was a guy from the track sitting on the floor. When I came down the straightaway, I was going about 165—with no seat belt on. He said, "What's the matter with you, you crazy fucker?" and he shut the motor off.

What kind of rig does Sidewinder drive in Kill Bill: Vol. 2?
An old, beat-up Chevy pickup. I prefer the Trans-Am Daryl Hannah's character drives. The line producer gave it to me because I didn't want that beat-down truck.

I did knock out a limousine driver once. He was going the wrong way

Do you pour gasoline and cut the ear off of anyone who cuts you off?
I did knock out a limousine driver once. He was going the wrong way after picking me up. I said, "Hey, I live in Malibu. Where are you going?" And he goes, "This is the way." I said it wasn't, but he kept going. I go, "OK, motherfucker, I'm going to jump in the front seat and knock you the fuck out, then I'm going to open the door, kick your butt out onto the freeway, take the car, turn it around and go home." So he drove down the exit ramp, took the keys and started running down the street. I chased him to get the keys from him and I had to knock him out. When the cops came, they thought I was Tom Sizemore. They kept calling me Tommy and asking if I enjoyed beating up Heidi Fleiss. I showed them my license, and they were like, "What the hell is Tom Sizemore doing with Madsen's ID?" I ended up calling another car company to pick me up and take me home.

Your Free Willy co-star, Keiko the killer whale, recently went to the big ocean in the sky. How did it make you feel?
It made me really sad. We made this film about people who set this whale free, and then all of these animal organizations actually wanted him free. He looked out there and said, "Fuck this! I'm going back to do some tricks and get a bucket of fish." Freeing Willy killed him! He's fucking dead because they did that.

HOW LONG WILL IT TAKE TO ENLARGE YOUR PENIS?

In a couple of weeks the change will be the width of your penis and longer lasting erections. After a month or two you will see a change in the length of your penis and again you will notice a thicker and wider penis. After the third month a very noticeable change, not just in size, but your penis will look firmer, stronger than you ever dreamed possible. No pill sold anywhere can give you the maximum potential you want in two months. Why settle for less when you can have much more. You need three to four months to grow to your maximum potential and we offer special prices for a three or four months supply with a 100% MONEY BACK GUARANTEE AND FREE OFFER!

HOW BIG IS BIG AND HOW MUCH DO YOU NEED TO SATISFY YOUR PARTNER?

Consider the difference between an 8 or 9 inch penis that is thicker and a penis that is 4 to 6 inches and narrower. With a larger penis you penetrate more sensitive areas of the woman. Your longer penis probes deeper searching those special nerve endings. The added width to your penis fills and presses her from side to side to give your partner the most exhilarating sensations. It is possible for you to reach the most sensitive area of all, a woman's G-spot. These sensations will produce for a woman the ultimate multiple orgasms. At the same time because you are reaching a woman's most sensitive areas with your larger penis you will receive more pleasure to your sensitive nerve endings. Just knowing you are giving your partner this pleasurable experience will certainly give you the added confidence of being a better lover.

WHAT WILL PRO+PLUS PILLS DO FOR ME?

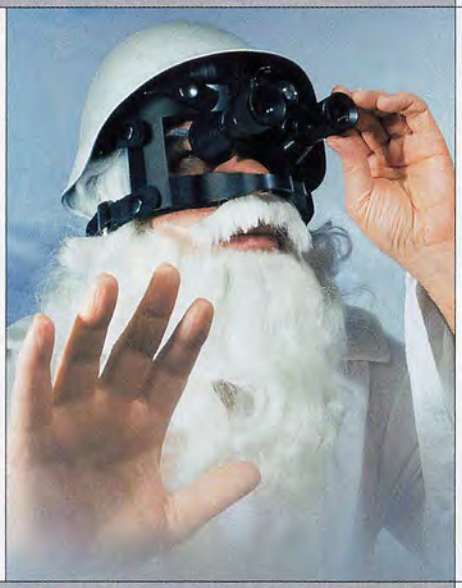
JVC GR-HD1

$3,500; www.jvc.com

Whether you're filming a school play of The Ten Commandments or your jackass friend snorting 10 condiments through his nose, JVC's GR-HD1 is the only camcorder that will record those treasures in 16:9, 720/30 progressive-scan video for that glorious, high-definition documentation. The 10x optical zoom allows precise focusing on Moses or the mucus, and its optical stabilizer compensates for your laughter-induced shaking.

NIGHT OWL NOFG1 $1,000; www.nightowloptics.com

God rests on the seventh day so He can enjoy His nights, and the NOFG1 makes His venturing inconspicuous. These flip-up night-vision goggles attach to your noggin to give you a 1,885-foot field of view in complete darkness, thanks to its integrated infrared illuminator. And God bless the lazy—there's a remote for easy p.m. usage.



MEADE LX200GPS-SMT $2,200; www.meade.com

Meade's LX200GPS-SMT is a robust telescope that uses the classic Schmidt-Cassegrain optic configuration. You knew that already. But did you know that its Autostar control system can locate any celestial object with its extensive library of orbital data? Be bold and try exotic searches such as Krypton, Druidia or the CIA satellite that's tracking you.

HYDROOPTIX MEGA -4.5d $200; www.hydrooptix.com

You may not notice while you're dodging sharks, but your traditional flat mask sucks. The HydroOptix has a 170-degree field of view—that's 75 percent more fish-peeping power—around its specially curved lenses, creating an effect that will give nearsighted users virtually 20/20 vision and show how scuzzy mermaids really are.

NIKON COOLPIX 8700 $1,000; www.nikonusa.com

Say you want a poster-sized pic of your ass. The Coolpix 8700 has 8 megapixels of butt-enlarging power that, considering the professional magnificence, is a bargain. Frame what your mama gave ya with its 35mm to 280mm 8x optical-zoom lens and preview your pose using the foldout vari-angle LCD or electronic viewfinder.

BUSHNELL INSTANTREPLAY $600; www.bushnell.com

Remember the Super Bowl halftime show, when TiVo turned us into armchair voyeurs? Bushnell cares about the helpless folks in the stands who couldn't hit replay, so they created 8x-magnifying binoculars with an LCD screen that can replay in real-life TiVo-style and capture 2.1 megapixel stills of celebrity and neighbor boobs alike.

i-GLASSES HRV PRO $1,200; www.i-glasses.com

You bought the DVD player and you purchased the DVDs, so why the hell should you share them? This personal high-resolution monitor simulates a 70-inch screen viewed from 13 feet away. And because it doesn't wash out with surrounding light, you can enjoy "back shelf" films even when divine light is hovering above you.

PHILIPS KEY006

$150; www.usa.philips.com

Certifiably stupid? Clinically dumb? Here's your MP3 player. There are no wires or programs—simply plug it into your computer's USB port and upload 128 MB worth of music. (That's about two hours of music . . . or three Led Zeppelin drum solos.) The little triangle means "Play" and you can use its neck strap to change the tracks and volume, thanks to embedded electrical fibers inside. Oops, sorry—thanks to the neck strap's unique magical powers!

RIO KARMA $350; www.rioaudio.com

Anytime you say "karma" in the context of music, you think of either that Culture Club chameleon or how Xtina will likely be reincarnated as a soiled mop. Now, with a 20 GB tune reservoir called Karma, you can think of taking your entire album collection anywhere and enjoying 15 hours of battery power between recharges.

iRIVER iGP-100 $250; www.iriver.com

Perhaps iRiver's player looks like a padlock for those "locking down" on file sharing. Or maybe it's for brass-knuckling copyright feds. Whatever the reason, it stores 1.5 GB of tunes, downloadable through a speedy USB 2.0, and even has an integrated FM tuner for those hankering for traffic reports and crap.

APPLE iPOD MINI $250; www.apple.com

If the original was King Kong, the mini would be Chim Chim—slightly less powerful, but oh so cute. This tiny 3.6-ounce iPod has an even tinier 4 GB internal hard drive for carrying your favorite 1,000 songs. Connect it to your Mac or Windows machine and enjoy the same super-easy navigation and silhouette-rocking vibe as before.

RCA LYRA RD2780 A/V JUKEBOX $450; www.rca.com

Unless you love in-flight viewings of Under the Tuscan Sun or listening to airline DJs, you have to carry on your entire entertainment system. RCA's A/V Jukebox has a 20 GB hard drive that handles MP3s, video and still pics. Record that Skin-A-Max show, then enjoy it on the 3.5-inch screen. The fatty in the middle seat will love you for it.

SONY MZ-N10 $350; www.sony.com

Mini-Discs are nothing new, but using them as an unlimited source of MP3 and WMA storage is friggin' revolutionary. The Sony's 64x transfer speed means loading it takes mere seconds. Plus, there's a built-in mic jack and six-band equalizer. If this doesn't give the bootleggers away at a show, the Grateful Dead smell will.

CREATIVE NOMAD MuVo TX $250; www.creative.com

The MuVo TX packs 512 MB of memory into a body so tiny, it could make an Ewok secure about its masculinity. Use the USB 2.0 to download 16 hours worth of MP3s and WMAs, then navigate around using the backlit LCD screen. Or just listen to them in the order God intended: The same order in which you swiped them. See ya in hell.

SHUTDOWN

GAME OVER

Eric Gagne spends more time in the gym than on the mound—and he has the hardware to prove it

BY JOHN MIHALY

When "Welcome to the Jungle" blares across Chavez Ravine in Los Angeles, it means two things: Axl is still making "artistic" changes to the Chinese Democracy album, and the Dodgers are going to win. With the G n' R cue, reliever Eric Gagne takes the mound and the opposition can direct their focus to the post-game plans. In his last 62 save opportunities dating back to 2002, Gagne has converted on all 62 of them and he has twice recorded 50 saves in a season, both major-league records. It was good enough to make him the first reliever in 11 years to win the Cy Young Award. But don't dare think that a closer has it easier than his teammates because he plays for only one inning. The 28-year-old Montreal native is one of the game's hardest workers and has to be talked into taking days off from his workout in order to get rest. As a reliever and power pitcher who brings 98 mph heat, Gagne's exercises focus more on strength and explosion than on flexibility and endurance. "I like that explosion workout because it gets your muscles ready to fire up right away," Gagne says. "That's the biggest thing for me as a pitcher—to be really smooth in my delivery and give 100 percent effort." And be 100 percent consistent.

JED JACOBSOHN/GETTY IMAGES; GORMAN & GORMAN

THE ERIC GAGNE WORKOUT

Test out the Cy Young winner's explosive exercises that are guaranteed to save the day—every day

HAMMER CURLS

Gagne can often be found sitting around, staring into a mirror at his muscles. No, the Cy Young hasn't made him narcissistic and lazy—he's just paying extra attention to his workout. "I really concentrate on my biceps and look into a mirror to focus," Gagne says. Have a seat with dumbbells at your sides and lift the weights, bending only your elbows. Don't turn your hands when you curl up because you want to work the inside of the biceps.

Gagne does Four sets of 12 reps of 40 pounds

ONE-ARM CABLE ROW

Back problems can force pitchers to change their everyday routine. For a daily hurler, that's no good. To strengthen your back, stand about six feet in front of a cable column that allows you to change the height and angle of the handled attachment. Keeping your shoulder stable, pull the handle until your arm forms an L. After a few pulls, change the height of the attachment. Your back reaps all the benefits because you're not raising your shoulder.

Gagne does Four sets of 10 at 165 pounds

FRONT DUMBBELL SQUAT

For a power pitcher, the best insurance against an arm injury isn't a policy from Lloyd's of London. "If your legs do all the work, you won't put as much pressure on your arm or elbow," Gagne says. This exercise boasts all the benefits of a basic squat but takes the strain off your spine. Hold the fat parts of a dumbbell on top of your chest, then make like R. Kelly and squat, squat, squat.

Gagne does Three sets of 10 reps, max weight 100 pounds

THE CHANDELIER

"Abs are important," Gagne says, "because they get your other body parts in sync." Lie down and have a spotter stand over your head. Raise your feet as if to kick his face and he'll retaliate by tossing your feet to the left, the right or back down. The key is to keep your abs tight and maintain resistance since you don't know where he'll push next.

Gagne does One set of 20 reps in each direction

IS IT FOR YOU?

You can coerce your softball teammates to pump Slash's finest every time you step on the diamond, but can you physically handle the exercises necessary to pump fear in the hearts of batters? "Everything we do is good for the average guy," says the Dodgers' strength and conditioning coach Todd Clausen, though one might want to start at lower weight levels to get the proper form. "The dumbbell squat is especially beneficial because you don't have to put a bar on your shoulders. That way, even if you have a problem, you won't need a spotter." The Chandelier, however, is a more advanced and more intense exercise. "The average person would be better off doing crunches anyway," he says.

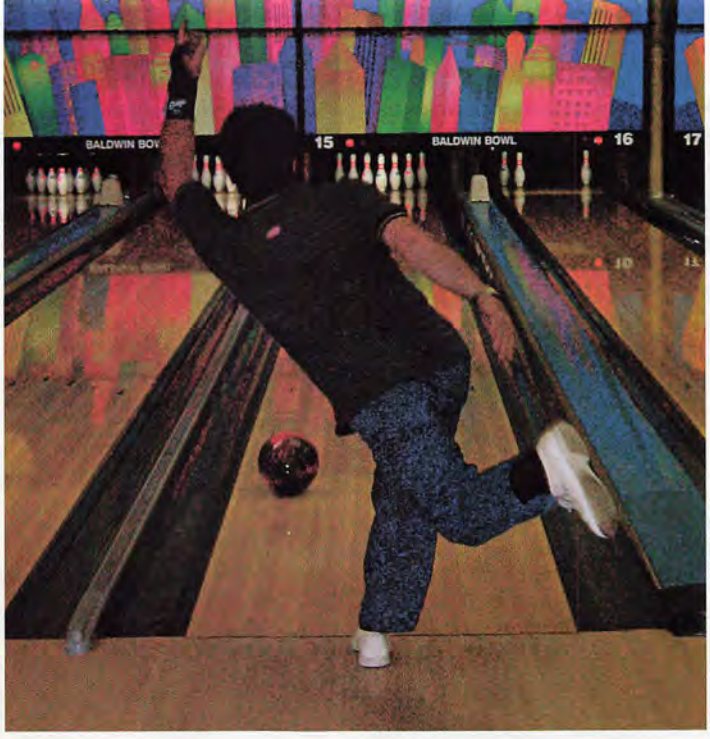
RUN THE LANES

FHM goes balls-out to test the latest in bowling technology



FAST FACT

Men are twice as likely to contract leprosy as women

No kingpin wants to finger house balls every Friday. To find the proper ball, Eastern Long Island Bowling Association veteran Peter Slavska focuses on the lane condition. Oily lanes need a ball with a duller finish; dry lanes like a shinier shine. But we'll worry about lanes once we figure out how to program our names.

The Alley Ball
"Thirty years ago, this wasn't a piece of garbage," Slavska says. "But this ball is made of rubber and it is extremely difficult to get to the strike zone. Miss left or right and you are dead."

Track Phenom Unleashed
$250; www.trackbowling.com
"It hooked early due to its dull finish and is not the right ball to use on dry lanes," Slavska explains. "But I can't wait to use it on oily conditions."

Brunswick Inferno
$220; www.brunswick.com
"I was impressed that it went longer before hooking," Slavska beams. "It was easier to control the pocket—the one and two pins—because of its shiny surface."

Ebonite TPC Player
$220; www.ebonite.com
"I had to move over two arrows—the targets on the lane—to change the breaking point. I got more area and it still hooked too much for me," Slavska says.

Columbia 300 Throttle Up
$240; www.columbia300.com
"I was pounding the pocket with this one," Slavska says. "I would use this one on dry lanes to get a snap or a more violent curve at the end."

Mocha makes semen strong
As if being a stimulant and a laxative weren't awesome enough, coffee can now help your splooge. Studies show that men who are moderate coffee drinkers have higher sperm motility than Fresca-sipping pansies, making evolutionary warriors out of otherwise lame, yuppie Starbucks fiends.

Move, Porko
Evidently, girls hate bald spots, bacne and your beanbag friend. The North American Association for the Study of Obesity has found that being next to a fatty means others find you 22 percent more unattractive than normal. Tubby is supersizing his meal and your chances of going home alone at the same time.

Males fire at will
The comfort of those four magic words ("I'm on the Pill") will soon be yours to wield as Australian researchers are testing a new male birth control. More than 50 gambling couples have tried the method, which involves injections of testosterone and the female cry-juice progestin. So far, no kids in the hall—only man-boobs.

HOW MUCH DO YOU BENCH?

What do you think of your larger-than-life self in NASCAR 3D: The IMAX Experience?
It looks pretty cool. I'm just excited to defend my points title this year and—
Cut the crap. How much do you bench?
320.
Liar!
I don't know. I haven't worked out in a while. I haven't been doing squat lately. My wife says I can only do 50 pounds.

The rest is waste, discarded by the organs of the body. "I've always considered myself to be an average guy - I have a good job and keep myself in great shape. Enhancing size and sexual performance was something I've always been interested in, I mean isn't everyone. It's not that I was small, it's just that I wanted to have a little extra size. And I'm not the most patient person in the world. I wanted a product that would work quickly. I'm happy to say that MAXODERM™ lives up to its claims. Thank you for making such a high quality product."

"With MAXODERM™, you know it's working because you FEEL it working!"

Last year, much was made of "curses" that have plagued certain baseball teams for decades. Hogwash! It's simply God's glorious plan. Red Sox fans are meant to bitch—just as substitute teachers exist to be mercilessly abused—and Cubs fans are meant to cry—just as nads are for being kicked. Send your cursed tales to True Stories, FHM, 110 Fifth Ave., New York, NY 10011, or e-mail them to truestories@FHMUS.com. The best gets $200; the rest get $50.

TRUE STORY OF THE MONTH

BALL GAME

Winner misses all-important dodging

I was playing with my sister's kids one weekend when a game of dodge ball broke out. I started as referee, but as soon as a ball rolled to me, it was like my inner 12-year-old took over. I had to join in. I was nailing nephews left and right and catching every throw that came my way. Casualties were curled fetuslike all over the front line, but before I could rejoice in being the last man standing, little Joey came to me, crying. I bent down to find out what was wrong and he said, "Mommy told me to do this." He then kicked me in the crotch. Turns out he had recently heard his mom's lesson on handling grownups who touch you in special places, and even though it was a soft, oversized orb that touched him, my jewels got the bruising.

UNTIMELY TUG

Muscle put through workout

I hadn't seen my girlfriend in a week due to her working late, so, feeling a bit built-up, I dove into a spur-of-the-moment wank in my living room. I closed my eyes and pictured my absent lover, along with any other female who popped into my head. Just as I was finishing, my girlfriend walked in to surprise me with a movie. It was pretty clear what I had been doing, but we're comfortable enough with each other that we could laugh it off. She came over to give me a forgiveness kiss, but stopped short of the coffee table with the look of someone who had seen a parade of roaches march across it. I followed her gaze down and saw a Bowflex brochure that had come in the mail—it was covered with pictures of ripped men. I hastily tried to explain I had other masturbation motivation, but to this day she still tells me to bring an extra towel when I go to the gym.

MISSED POINT

Date doesn't get the digits

My friend and his girlfriend are overly concerned with my love life, so they arranged a double date to the movies, pairing me with one of her friends. We met outside the theater and I could immediately tell the girl was something special: really good-looking and genuinely nice. After the movie, we all headed to my car, where I opened the door for her. When I got in, she seemed to be pointing at something. It wasn't until I bluntly asked her, "What are you pointing at?" that I realized she was missing her pinkie, ring and middle fingers from the middle knuckle up. I scrambled to cover my tracks and picked an umbrella off the floor. "Of course, this umbrella," I said. We didn't speak for the rest of the night, and had she been equipped, she probably would have flipped me off.

WET WORKS

Promotion-earner falls back in it

My boss, whom I avoid at all costs, called me into his office. When I arrived, he gave me a disapproving eye and said, "My boss wants me to promote you to district manager." I was thrilled, but instead of congratulations, I got a long-winded speech. "You're no longer a mere worker bee, " he said. "You'll have to carry yourself with dignity from now on." I told him he could count on me, then left for the bathroom. I finished up and, being a germaphobe, went to flush the toilet with my shoe. I didn't get much traction and my foot slipped, right into the crapper. Less than five minutes after saying I'd carry myself with more dignity, I returned to my desk with poo water up to my shin.
